To whom it may Concern:

I feel it is about time I write to you and more so since the Jonestown tragedy.

REC-24 50-0

I am a former church of 50-353-X
Scientology member and finally got away from there in August of this year. I was in Los Angeles at American St. Hill organization from Sept. 1977 to august 1978.

DEC 13

I am not very good at writing editorials but my story would amaze you as to what the Church is planning for their future.

I believe this organization should be investigated thoroughly as to their intentions for the future, if you can get the truth, and what they are trying to do.

My own opinion is that L. Ron Hubbard is building his own private NAVY and will try his utmost to overpower our government in the future.

If you wish to talk to me, I will be glad to let you know what I have been through.

Sincerely,

On January 8, 1979, [redacted] home address [redacted] telephone number [redacted] advised she is currently employed as a [redacted] with [redacted] telephone number [redacted] furnished the following information concerning her former association and membership in the Church of Scientology:

b6 - 2, 8
b7C - 2, 8

[redacted] advised that [redacted] who lives in Los Angeles, California, encouraged her to become a member of the Church of Scientology (CS) and as a result [redacted] took a test given by CS in Los Angeles, California, consisting of approximately 200 questions. The answers to these questions were analyzed by CS, Los Angeles, and apparently would show where [redacted] weaknesses were in her life. As a result of taking this test [redacted] then joined CS on May 31, 1977, in Oakland, California, at the CS Mission located there on Sixth Street. After joining the CS Mission in Oakland, California, [redacted] was encouraged to take a course called "Communications" for which she paid $90 cash. [redacted] attended this "Communications" course Monday through Friday from approximately 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. and basically it was an encounter group course offered by CS.

b6 - 8
b7C - 8

While taking the "Communications" course [redacted] was advised by one of the CS counselors that she had so many personal problems, [redacted] should take a "Life Repair" auditing course for which [redacted] paid $1,700 in cash. [redacted] indicated this course consisted of 24 hours of auditing. [redacted] explained that this course consisted of her placing her hands on e-meters which is similar to a lie detector machine and is used by the CS to help a person through his problem. [redacted] advised that the e-meter machine records electronically responses the person makes to questions asked by the operator of the machine and basically the questions are questions about the person's personal life going back many years. [redacted] pointed out that CS believes in reincarnation.

b7C - 3

Later [redacted] said that after two months of taking the "Communications" and "Life Repair" courses she was told that the CS American Saint Hill Organization (ASHO) in Los Angeles, California, offered other courses which [redacted] should be taking in order to improve her life. Subsequently [redacted] received a letter from the ASHO in Los Angeles offering her [redacted] position. [redacted] went to Los Angeles, California, on [redacted], and asked for [redacted] the person who had offered her [redacted] position with CS. [redacted] was told [redacted] was not available and as a result [redacted] was not able to get a [redacted]. [redacted] said that since she did not have a place to stay she stayed in the "Manor", a hotel owned by CS on Franklin Street in Hollywood, California, where she paid $247.50 for room, board and parking. [redacted] noted that each room had four people in it. [redacted] advised that for approximately two months she attended CS-sponsored courses at the ASHO facility on Temple Street in Los Angeles, California, and then ran short of money so she then took a job working the elevator in the CS-owned "Manor" Hotel and also worked in central filing in the basement of the "Manor." [redacted] said that while working days at the "Manor" she continued to take CS-sponsored courses in the evening.

b7C - 2, 8

[redacted] indicated that in February, 1978, she became disenchanted with the courses offered by CS so she quit her job at CS and moved to her own apartment on Catalina Avenue in West Los Angeles, California, and took a job as a [redacted] Los Angeles, California. However, [redacted] continued to attend the night classes offered by CS until she came down with a case of pneumonia in April, 1978. [redacted] said she then, for three weeks, did not attend any of the courses offered by CS and obtained a letter from a private physician stating that she should not be attending any of these courses. [redacted] furnished a copy of this letter to CS as they wanted her to continue with her courses although she was still sick.

b7C - 8

[redacted] then was encouraged by [redacted] to go back to CS and begin taking the courses offered in Los Angeles, California, as CS members believe that anyone that is sick does not belong in CS and the sickness is being caused by someone else. As a result of [redacted] encouragement, [redacted] again went back and attended CS courses in the evening but before she could continue her regular courses she was required to again be subjected to the e-meter examination which she previously mentioned was the same as a lie detector test. This e-meter examination was designed to determine who was making [redacted] sick.

b7C -2, 8

[redacted] advised that subsequently she was allowed to take a course involving forming figures out of clay. Each of these figures was to relate to a story but in order to pass the course another member had to approve all of the figurines made by [redacted] flunked the course and would need to get more e-metering before she would be allowed to get back on with the course. [redacted] said she paid another $103 for this special e-metering at which time she was allowed back in the course. At this point [redacted] said that she became very frustrated with making these clay figurines and as a result informed CS counselors that she no longer wanted to be a member in CS and wanted her money back. As a result [redacted] filled out a "Routing Out Form" and it was her understanding it would take her three hours to be processed out. However, [redacted] said that CS counselors through delaying tactics spent two weeks trying to convince her not to leave CS. However, no amount of convincing on the part of the CS counselors would relieve [redacted] of her decision to leave. [redacted] left the CS in [redacted] and moved to [redacted] CS, Los Angeles, refunded her money in the amount of $1,272 and also charged her $140 for administrative charges in connection with her processing out of CS.

b6 - 8
b7C - 8

[redacted] stated that she was never held against her will while she was associated with CS either in Oakland, California, or Los Angeles - Hollywood, California, but felt that she was very much delayed at the time she wanted to get out of CS by having to wait long periods of time between her phasing out process. [redacted] said that she was never physically mistreated while at CS.

[redacted] advised that she wrote a letter to the U. S. Department of Justice, Washington, D. C., in November, 1978, so that someone in authority would be aware of what CS is all about. [redacted] noted that the founder of CS, L. RONALD HUBBARD, is a retired Navy man who apparently was not treated well while in the Navy and as a result feels the government is no good. [redacted] said she is of the opinion from all courses she has taken while in CS as well as the books written by HUBBARD that CS will isolate itself from anyone not a member and due to HUBBARD's disenchantment with the government he will isolate himself from the government. [redacted] said she has no direct knowledge of any overt acts CS may try to make against the government of the United States.

Memorandum

TO: Mr. J. B. Adams

DATE: 8-23-74

FROM: Legal Counsel

SUBJECT: CORRESPONDENCE WITH [redacted]
THE CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY

b6 - 2
b7C - 2

Reference is made to letters dated 5-3-74, 6-10-74, 6-25-74, and 8-2-74 from captioned individual to this Bureau. The initial two communications were answered by Bulets dated 5-16-74 and 6-20-74. The 6-25-74 letter from [redacted] was not acknowledged, and it is our view the most recent letter of 8-2-74 should also not be answered.

Our files reveal no identifiable information with correspondent outside of the described communications. It should be noted the letters were written on the stationery of the Church of Scientology. The Church of Scientology of Washington, D. C., Inc., has sued the FBI for information in our files concerning that organization and its affiliates under the Freedom of Information Act.

Correspondent is mainly interested in our policy with regard to allowing individuals access to their FBI files and our reasons behind this. We feel his inquiries have been sufficiently answered by the above-mentioned Bulets and the letter prior to this most recent communication appears to be frivolous in nature. Consequently, we believe it is unnecessary to continue a dialogue in letters which could go on indefinitely.

RECOMMENDATION:

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

FOUNDING CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY OF WASHINGTON, D.C., INC.,

Plaintiff,

v.

CLARENCE M. KELLEY, Director Federal Bureau of Investigation, et al.,

Defendants.

Civil Action No. 74-333

DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT

Defendants by their attorney, the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, respectfully move the Court, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 12(e), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, that the plaintiff be ordered to furnish a more definite statement of the matters stated in the complaint filed herein on June 13, 1974 in the following respects:

1. Identity of plaintiff.

2. Exhaustion of administrative remedies.

3. False, misleading and incomplete information in records of defendants.

4. False, incomplete and incorrect information collected, compiled, and disseminated by defendants.

5. Scope of relief requested.

Defendants submit that the allegations of the complaint relating to the above matters are ambiguous and vague in that they generally refer to the attached memorandum of points and authorities which is incorporated into this motion by reference. The ambiguities in the complaint as written prevent defendants from effectively formulating a pleading responsive to the complaint. A requirement that plaintiff file a more definite statement would enable defendants to effectively respond to the complaint and should materially advance the ultimate disposition of this action.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

FOUNDING CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY OF WASHINGTON, D.C., INC., Plaintiff, v. CLARENCE M. KELLEY, Director Federal Bureau of Investigation, et al., Defendants.	Civil Action No. 74-093

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT

Plaintiff in its two count complaint asks the Court to order defendants to disclose records under the Freedom of Information Act and to refrain from disseminating information which plaintiff alleges constitutes a violation of its right to freedom of religion. As will be shown below, a careful reading of the complaint reveals obvious ambiguities which prevent defendants from effectively formulating a response to the complaint. Rule 12(e), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, is the appropriate means of resolving the ambiguities and defects in the complaint. Therefore, defendants contend that plaintiff should be ordered to file a more definite statement in order to clarify the ambiguities as set forth more fully below.

Argument

The caption of the complaint reflects that the plaintiff is the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc. In paragraph 2 of the complaint, plaintiff alleges that it is "a non-profit corporation incorporated in the District of Columbia, with its principal office at 2125 S Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., as a religious organization practicing the religion of Scientology and which religion claims approximately one half million adherents in the United States of America and approximately three million adherents outside the United States."

ENCLOSURE 62-116151-1

Scientology-1032

From the above there should be little question as to the identity of the plaintiff. A careful examination of the complaint, however, reveals an obvious ambiguity, an ambiguity which plaintiff should be required to clarify.

Plaintiff's first cause of action is a claim for disclosure of documents pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act. (Complaint, paras. 7-20). Plaintiff alleges that it has requested each of the defendants to disclose documents relating to plaintiff but that defendants have refused such disclosure. (Complaint, paras. 10-16). In each of these paragraphs, plaintiff references Exhibits to the complaint which are incorporated into the complaint. Plaintiff alleges that these exhibits contain letters which are plaintiff's requests to defendants for disclosure and defendants' denials of plaintiff's requests.

These letters clearly indicate, however, that the requests for disclosure were initiated by [redacted], of Hollywood, California, b6 - 2 b7C - 2 the General Counsel to the Church of Scientology of California on behalf of his client, the Church of Scientology of California. The administrative requests were for records relating to that Church, which, [redacted] acted, might be characterized or indexed under the name Scientology or Church of Scientology." (Complaint, Exhibits A-C). At no place in these requests is mentioned the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc., the purported plaintiff herein. Yet, the complaint alleges that plaintiff made such requests.

The ambiguity or defect is obvious. It is impossible for defendants to determine whether plaintiff is the Founding Church of Scientology, Washington, D.C., the Church of Scientology of California, Church of Scientology or Scientology. Likewise, when reading the complaint with its incorporated Exhibits, it is impossible to determine whether the records requested relate to one or more of these entities.

It is obvious that defendants are entitled to know, by way of a more definite statement, whether the purported plaintiff, the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc. considers itself to be a separate entity or whether it considers itself or included within the Church of Scientology of California or possibly the Church of Scientology or Scientology as a broader entity. If plaintiff contends first it is a separate entity then plaintiff is called upon to state why they assert that plaintiff took the letters found in Exhibits A-C to the complaint. (Cf. Complaint, paras. 10-16). The further question arises, and should be clarified, as to whether this action is being brought in the name of the real parties in interest as required by Rule 17, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Likewise, plaintiff is called upon to specifically state whether the records sought relate solely to the Washington church, relate to the Washington and California churches, or relate in general to the Church of Scientology or Scientology. Lastly defendants should not be required to divine or guess at matters which plaintiff could have easily alleged in a clear and unambiguous manner in the complaint.

The defects in the complaint are even more obvious upon further scrutiny of plaintiff's allegation that "[p]laintiff has exhausted its administrative remedies." (Complaint, para. 31). As stated previously, plaintiff, in alleging exhaustion, relies upon the agency denials of administrative requests by the Church of Scientology of California which contain no mention of the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc. As part of its second cause of action relating to freedom of religion, plaintiff incorporates by reference Exhibits D-F to the complaint. (Complaint, paras. 38-40). These exhibits contain letters sent to defendants by [redacted], an attorney of record in this case, which request that dissemination by defendants of false information relating to his client, the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc., be stopped. [redacted] suggests that a complete copy of his client's file be sent to him so that he could "prepare a list of corrections and additional data which will ensure that the file is accurate and complete." At no place in the complaint, however, does plaintiff allege that these letters constituted an administrative request

b7C - 2

Scientology-1034

pursuant to the Information Act for disclosure of records, and they clearly do not appear to be such. In my count, plaintiff does not allege that defendants' refusals to produce were appealed by [redacted] to the final administrative level, which is required for exhaustion of administrative records. (5 U.S.C. 552(a)(6); 28 C.F.R. 16.7(c); 3 C.F.R. 1.7). b6 - 2 b7C - 2

The confusion is multiplied by the fact that [redacted] has requested various types of administrative relief, including in some instances requests for records, on behalf of not only the Washington, D.C. church but also on behalf of the California Church as well as Mr. L. Ron Hubbard, the Founder of Scientology (See United States v. Articles of Device, . . . Hubbard Electrometer, 333 F.Supp. 857, affirmed as to facts and law, relief modified, by order of March 1, 1973, U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia). In addition, defendants have received requests for records relating to L. Ron Hubbard and Scientology or Church of Scientology from [redacted] a Washington, D.C. attorney, on behalf of Mr. Hubbard and CTC, Ltd., and requests from [redacted] Esq., for records of the Church of Scientology of California as stated previously. b6 - 2 b7C - 2

Moreover, Mrs. Lyan Meisel, President of the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc. contacted the F.B.I. on May 8, 1974 and inquired into the status of the request of [redacted] for documents in our files concerning Mr. Hubbard and the Church of Scientology. She was advised of the confusion as to who actually represented the organization and Mr. Hubbard since requests had been received from [redacted] in addition to [redacted] request. She advised that the data should be made available to [redacted] and that she, in her capacity as head of the Washington, D.C. Church, would contact [redacted] and advise him to write Mr. Kelly cancelling his request. Such a letter was not forthcoming. b6 - 2 b7C - 2

It may be that this action is subject to dismissal for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. 5 U.S.C. 552(a)(6); 28 U.S.C. 10.7 (a); 5 C.F.R. 1.7; Trehinsky v. Selective Service System, 410 F.2d 155, 158 (7th Cir. 1969). Defendants believe, however, that they are not in a position to determine whether such a motion would lie because of the ambiguities in the complaint. Defendants submit that they are entitled to know precisely what plaintiff is relying upon as constituting its exhaustion of administrative remedies as alleged in paragraph 21 of the complaint. Or it may be, in light of the readily apparent ambiguities, that plaintiff might choose to withdraw this lawsuit and take steps to ensure that exhaustion of its administrative remedies has been perfected.

Further ambiguities exist regarding plaintiff's claims relating to the alleged records which apparently constitute the underlying basis for this lawsuit. In its first cause of action, plaintiff alleges that FBI records relating to plaintiff contain alleged statements of fact which are false but which the FBI has represented to be true when disseminating the information, and also contain reports, opinions, and notations concerning plaintiff which contain false misleading and incomplete information. Plaintiff alleges that these records have been disseminated to federal agencies, to various international organizations, to foreign countries, to departments of foreign governments and to state and municipal authorities in the United States. Plaintiff alleges that these records are public information and should be disclosed to plaintiff under the Information Act.

In its second cause of notice, which asserts that defendants have violated its right to freedom of religion, plaintiff incorporates by reference the allegations concerning the above-noted records and asks the Court to order defendants to stop any dissemination thereof.

A plaintiff who sues under the Freedom of Information Act necessarily claims that the information he seeks is public. Thus, our plaintiff must be claiming in Count 1 that anyone can obtain the records referred to in Count 1. Yet, in Count 3, plaintiff appears to claim that the government should not be disseminating the information. Plaintiff should be required to explain the obvious inconsistency and ambiguity in a more definite statement so that defendants can plead or move.

Further, it is not clear whether plaintiff is contending (1) that the government cannot receive information in its files which might be incorrect (2) that defendants must investigate and verify all claims or statements made to them or (3) that defendants cannot transmit unverified information to law enforcement and government agencies.

As to plaintiff's allegations that defendants' records contain alleged statements of fact which are false, plaintiff identifies these as statements that (a) plaintiff was founded for the purpose of obtaining an income tax exemption, (b) the activities of plaintiff are "a sort of brainwashing"; and (c) plaintiff has used criminal or other improper means to obtain millions of dollars. (Complaint, paragraph 8). Apart from the question concerning the identity of plaintiff, plaintiff has failed to allege with any specificity who made such alleged false statements, and to whom and in what manner they have been disseminated by defendants.

As to plaintiff's claim that defendants have reports and dossiers which contain false, misleading and incomplete information, plaintiff has completely failed to specify what erroneous or incomplete information is found in defendants' files. Nor has plaintiff alleged that it has sent a list of such alleged inaccuracies to defendants with a request for review by defendants of the file or with a recommendation that plaintiff's submission be included in the file. Plaintiff never alleges that defendants have refused to disseminate information submitted by plaintiff about itself which plaintiff contends to be true and accurate.

Plaintiff's allegations that defendants maintain and disseminate files which contain false and misleading information and which defendants represent to be true are in the nature of allegations of fraud or mistake which must be pleaded with specificity. Rule 9(b), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The general and ambiguous allegations of plaintiff's complaint simply do not allow defendants to formulate a pleading responsive to the complaint and plaintiff should be required to file a more definite statement.

Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, this Court should require plaintiff to file a more definite statement.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES
IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS'
MOTION FOR RULING BY MAGISTRATE
ON DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT AND FOR ENLARGEMENT OF TIME

This matter came before the Honorable Arthur L. Burnett on October 3, 1974 on defendants' motion for more definite statement. After lengthy argument, the Magistrate suggested that plaintiff consider clarifying certain matters in the complaint and to consult with defendants in an effort to resolve the matter without the need of a ruling by the Magistrate.

On October 10, 1974, plaintiff served defendants with an amended complaint. Although plaintiff had advised defendants that it contemplated adding the ~~Church~~ Church of Scientology of Calif. California, Inc. as a plaintiff, no consultation with defendants was undertaken about the content of the amended complaint. Moreover, even after the filing of the amended complaint, defendants' counsel asked plaintiff's counsel whether plaintiff wished to consult on the matters presented by the motion for more definite statement. Plaintiff declined.

In view of plaintiff's unilateral action despite the pendency of the motion and [redacted] suggestion, defendants submit that they are entitled to a ruling on the matters raised by their pending motion for more definite statement, which is incorporated herein by reference.

The amended complaint does little to resolve the ambiguities in the original complaint.

1. The identity of plaintiff. It appears that plaintiff has made an effort to resolve this ambiguity by adding as a plaintiff the Church of Scientology of California, Inc. Yet they still refer to themselves on occasion in the singular. (See amended complaint, paragraphs 30 and 31). 1/

2. The scope of the records sought in the action. Plaintiff has not even attempted to clarify this ambiguity.

3. The correspondence on which plaintiffs base the claim of exhaustion. Count II of the amended complaint relates to both plaintiffs and includes an allegation that plaintiffs have exhausted administrative remedies. (Paragraph 41). Yet the amended complaint incorporates exhibits which relate only to the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D.C., Inc. 2/

4. The apparent ambiguity as to whether plaintiffs contend that the files of defendants, for which disclosure is sought in Count I, are public information and can be disclosed to anyone or whether such files cannot be disclosed.

5. A statement with particularity of the information in the records of defendants which plaintiffs contend to be false, misleading and incomplete. (Rule 9(b), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure). The Magistrate, in questioning counsel for plaintiffs at the hearing, inquired how plaintiffs could make the verified claim if they cannot be more specific. Reference

1/ For the Court's information, we note that paragraphs 16, 17 and 18 of the amended complaint refer to plaintiffs while [redacted] reflect that administrative requests were made only on behalf of the Church of Scientology of California, Inc.

2/ As to plaintiffs claim of exhaustion in Count 1, see footnote 1 above.

Scientology-1069

was also made to the analogy between the claim here -- dissemination of false, misleading and incomplete information -- and fraud, Rule 9(b), FRCP. The Magistrate even alluded to the possibility that if specific allegations were made of false or misleading statements, the defendants might conceivably take corrective action. Plaintiffs should be required to specifically allege, according to their information, who disseminated information to whom, what the information consisted of, and when said dissemination was made.

6. In light of the above stated ambiguities in the amended complaint, the scope of relief requested therefore remains ambiguous.

For the above reasons, defendants contend that they are entitled to a ruling on their pending motion for a more definite statement. In addition, they submit they should be accorded an enlargement of time to and including ten days from the receipt of said ruling within which they may respond to the amended complaint if it is allowed to stand.

CONDEMNATION OF POLITICAL AND RACIAL AGITATION

by L.Ron Hubbard

Today, as a culture, we poise on the brink of destruction. It does not matter whether that destruction will come with a dramatic bang or by political upheaval. We cannot, any of us, pretend that all is well or that all will be well. It is not so. The turbulence in the society around us is fantastic. There is a danger point below which a society cannot go without reaching a breaking point and going mad.

A society is reduced by the introduction into it of dissatisfied elements. Any society which contains aberrated (irrational or deranged) members is likely to become entirely aberrated as a group through contagion of aberration.

The government of a society, to a Scientologist, is a thing of reason and all problems of government can be resolved with reason. There is no national problem in the world today which cannot be resolved by reason alone. Barbarism, however, solves problems with brutality and with political and racial violence. Man's answer, in his more barbaric stage, was always VIOLENCE. If you weren't obeyed, use VIOLENCE! If you were balked, use VIOLENCE! If they wouldn't bow or scrape or wouldn't lick the boots, then VIOLENCE was the answer. But where did all this violence get Man? Where did rows of trenches, for four years filled with uncounted dead, get Man? Just where the A Bomb and H Bomb will get him - back to barbarism!

What would you think of an agitator who incited violence against the weak, the helpless, against women and children? What would you think of someone who solved all his problems by threats of violence? You would be right. Such a person would be insane.

The insane aren't always stupid but they are certainly insane. Police are continually baffled by the irrationality of such political and racial agitators. Since police officers are, ordinarily, rational men and tend, themselves, towards survival, they sometimes cannot readily comprehend that the agitator habitually takes the route of non-survival for himself and his group.

Society is more or less organized on the basis that there are good people and bad people. There are two dominant behaviour patterns. There are people who are trying to build things up and others who are trying to tear things down, who are agitating for destruction. It is a problem of disastrous motives and constructive motives. The basic travail of Man is that he is divided into those who build and those who demolish, and in this conflict of intentions, whichever side he is on, his fight is always lost. Or was lost until the Scientologist came along.

A Scientologist is capable of bringing a considerable calmness into an area which is upset. That is the true story of Scientology. Behind its progress there is a calmer environment in which a man can live and feel better. There is no doubt that Scientology does work. It calms the environment.

We live in a civilization where some madman can sit in a government chair telling everybody how bad it is over there and then, all of a sudden, get 30 million people killed, as one fellow named . . .

Hitler did. We live in a society where political and racial violence can explode at the instigation of mentally disturbed agitators. Is there any hope that the movement towards the destruction of our society can be checked and the tide turned towards construction?

Yes, there is a hope. Scientologists are rich in knowing how to exactly handle such circumstances or conditions. Nobody knew before. That is factually true here on Earth. We are the only group on Earth that does have a workable solution.

Scientology can and does change human behaviour for the better. It is a science of life and it works. It handles the basic rules of life and it brings order into chaos. My purpose is to form, here on Earth, a civilization based on human understanding, not violence.

A civilization without insanity, without criminals and without war, where the able can prosper and honest beings have rights, and where Man is free to rise to greater heights, are the aims of Scientology. Non-political in nature, Scientology welcomes any individual of any creed, race or nation.

We are working to provide a safe environment in Scientology Organizations everywhere. The dangerous environment of the everyday world, of injustice, sudden dismissals, riots, war, atomic bombs will only persist if we fail to spread this safe environment across the world.

Dear [redacted]

In the interest of expediting this case, we have agreed to withdraw our motion to compel production of a Vaughn index, and accept your stipulation that you will produce such an index no later than November 1, 1988.

Although we are not pressing for an order in the form we initially requested, we continue to believe that a description of each deletion or withheld document, and an explanation of why each exemption claimed is applicable, are indispensable elements of a Vaughn index. See Founding Church of Scientology v. Bell, 603 F.2d 945, 949 (D.C. Cir. 1979). The explanation need not be so detailed that it reveals the information at issue, but it must be sufficiently specific to permit a reasoned judgment as to whether the material is actually exempt under the Freedom of Information Act. We regard conclusory assertions and canned responses of the type the FBI has submitted in other cases to be inadequate. See King v. U.S. Department of Justice, 830 F.2d 210 (D.C. Cir. 1987). Therefore, we reserve the right to challenge the sufficiency of your Vaughn index, should we consider it necessary to do so.

IN THE

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNTED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1989

CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY OF CALIFORNIA,

Petitioner,

v.

[redacted] b6 - 2 b7C - 2

Respondent.

On Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeal of the State of California, Second Appellate District

Supplemental Brief

Respondent [redacted] submits this supplemental memorandum to bring to the courts attention several new important factors relevant to the courts ability to fairly resolve this case. b6 - 2 b7C - 2

1.) I, [redacted] am formally requesting the court to appoint an attorney to represent me. I am now out of all cash resources. 1

Scientology's court strategy as stated by their founder, L. Ron Hubbard, will also better help explain my complete financial exaustion and why I am now at the mercy of the court.

1 See Appendix B.

"The purpose of a lawsuit is to harass and discourage rather that to win. . ."

"Don't ever defend. Always attack. Find or manufacture enough threat against them to cause them to sue for peace. 2 Originate a black PR campaign to destroy the person's repute and to discredit them so thoroughly they will be ostracized. . ."

"The law can be used very easily to harass, and enough harassment on somebody who is simply on the thin edge anyway, will knowing that he is not authorized, will generally be sufficient to cause his professional decease. If possible, of course, RUIN HIM UTTERLY....." From A Manual on the Dissemination of Material (1955), by L. Ron. Hubbard [emphasis added].

And yet from another document titled "Battle Tactics" siezed in the authorized FBI search of church headquarters.

"So never get reasonable about him [enemies] just go all the way in and obliterate him."

From church policy HCOPL 18 Oct 1967 entered as an exhibit at my trial "The Fair Game Policy" in which an enemy "[they] may be deprived of property of injured by any means by any Scientologist without any discipline of the Scientologist...may be tricked, sued, or lied to or DESTROYED [emphasis added]."

Regarding my most recent temporary counsel [redacted] our relationship has been ended. He is no longer acceptable even though he is only too willing to extend me credit. There seems to be either a significant conflict of interest or unfortunate

b7C - 2

2 They offered me 4-6 million dollars to settle, ethically because of what harm they are continuing to do to young adults and families, I turned them down.

collection of coincidences in [redacted] original opposition papers 3 which seem to support in significant ways Scientology's subsequent filings and positions. b6 - 2 b7C - 2

In appointing a new attorney for this extraordinary case I would ask the court to consider several logical factors. 1. The appointee should ideally have no family or significant relationships. 2. No attachments to money, career or personal reputation. 3. Hopefully knowledgable and familiar with this speciality area of the law. 4. A criminal prosecution, security, or intelligence background. 5. A near lily white personal background, and finally 6. They should not in this case for obvious reasons be a volunteer or of an "out of court" settlement seeking bias.

When such an individual is appointed I hope the court can also find some way to engage [redacted] the harassed former attorney in California who handled this case to assist or participate to help maintain case continuity in the difficult transition for a case of more than 20,000 pages. b6 - 2 b7C - 2

[redacted] integrity and ability is unquestionable but he is for logical reasons very difficult to reach. b6 - 2 b7C - 2

2.) Due to Scientology's long, on going, and proven history of adversarial harassment, I beg the mercy of, and formally request that the Supreme Court also initiate a public or internal investigation by the Justice Department and/or the FBI, and any other applicable government agencies who would have revelant juristiction or information regarding Scientology's conspiracy to tampering with and obstruct justice during the process of my case.

Specifically investigating, but not limited to:

A. The theft or alteration of, or planting of false court and case documents. B. Illegal wire taps and physical surveliance. C. Intimidation of witnesses, members of the court, and the opposition. D. Harassment by scientology detectives, investigators, or "front" groups. E. Purjury by Scientology witnesses, particularly through not exclusively as it relates to the true net worth of the organization or the covert and defacto control of dummy corporations into which hundreds of milions of dollars of Scientology assets were transferred. F. The illegal use of political and social "front" groups to disguise Scientology's identity and role and to illegally influence members of the lower court system. 4 G. A collusion between Scientology, the Hare Krishnas, and the Unification Church to use "unduley influenced" church members to act as false witnesses and to create dummy case situations in order to create fraudulent "precidents" which were then used to influence or mitigate other bonafide cases. H. The use of frivolous and harassing law suits such as the Religious Technologies Corporation case against me to further deplete our resources and hinder our ability to litigate on the bonafide case and issues. I. The placement of Scientology operatives in the various court clerk and administrative offices through which this case has passed. J. The knowledge and/or direct or indirect involvement by the law firms hired by Scientology in the before-mentioned.

4 If Scientology remains true to form it would not be unreasonable to see its "front" groups working in the background to reverse the recent Scalia/peyote Supreme Court decision as it has a direct bearing on this case.

There are very reasonable grounds for this request. I implore the court to inspect the key authorized FBI Scientology search documents such as, "Dear Mo, Re Intelligence.

The following are possibilities for collecting information: 1)Infiltration 2)Bribery 3)Buying Information 4)Robbery 5)Blackmail. . ."

And from another document, "Re: Coding/Wording of Messages Re: B-1 [Intelligence Division] Activities Motiff.

General catagories of data needing coding for BI.

1. Incriminating undercover activities and the like. This breaks down into the following areas. . .

1.Evidence of the C of S (church of Scientology) lobbying.

2.Evidence of the C of S (church of Scientology) engaging in political activities - proposing legislation supporting candidates.

3.Evidence of legal or control ties to the B-6 [front] groups."

Scientology would love the court to believe its notorious Guardian Office was disbanded and its new Office of Special Affairs is the "leopard" that changed its spots. This is historically highly unlikely 5 and it certainly does not meet with my ongoing experience for the last 10 years. Or for that matter the experience of any other major Scientology adversaries which I am aware of, when they were the key focus of Scientology's attention.

5 See Reply to Brief in Opposition U.S. 89-1367 pages A-F Appendix A "A Historical Overview of the Extraordinary Nature of Scientology and its Alter Ego Dianetics. Secret societies are infamous for setting up and disbanding front groups only to later set up the SAME activity in another new front group".

I can live with being kicked when I'm "blindfolded" and have my hands tied behind my back. I can even learn to live with being hit below the belt with no referee around to call it. After 10 years I'm used to that. But when the beforementioned is done to me and my team from behind the legal privileges and advantages of the First Amendment sanctuary, a sanctuary and sacred trust designed to protect bonafide religions bringing social benefit and uplift to the society, I know as an average citizen it is now time for me to SHOUT OUT for some serious investigating, and defencive and supportive help from those people and organizations in the society who are supposed to have both the individual courage and governmental resources to stand up and deal with such psycho terrorism and tactics.

3.) This First Amendment sanctuary abuse is even more outrageous when the court considers the new information that in Israel, Mexico, and Denmark [6] Scientology and its alter ego Dianetics provide its same practices as a SECULAR type business organization.

One wonders how Scientology can claim without complete hyprocracy that protected and unprotected activities were incorrectly allowed to go to the jury for judgment when in the beforementioned countries Scientology is selling the very same practices courses and materials as secular business and personal improvement services. In some cases even recieving business improvement tax credits for its customers for these services.

It is not only in foreign countries that Scientology is inconsistant in representing itself as a religion. In the "dummy company" operations of the Hubbard Dianetic Foundation here in the U.S. a similar strategy is found.

While Scientology's attorneys will go to any length to protect Scientology's religious status and legal privileges their client is simultaneously persuing a massive effort through a secular "bait and switch" advertizing fraud to hide and disguise its true identity and "religious" status from the American public.

One can hardly turn on a TV, see a Goodwill Games ad, or read a magazine without seeing ads for Dianetics, the cornerstone textbook and lead in for all of Scientology. What you won't see is any mention of in these ads is that Scientology is the real source behind the books, Bridge publications [its publisher], and the money for the ads. When you look into the Dianetics book you are given a list of organizations referred to as Hubbard Dianetic Foundations to call for more information. These, in almost all cases are "churches" of Scientology, answering the phone deceptively with "Dianetics or The Hubbard Dianetic Foundation", and/or denying any affiliation with Scientology to disguise their real identity. The FTC is recieving a lot of complaints related to this "bait" with secular Dianetics, then "trance out" and impair normal critical judgment with suggestability increasing hypnotic processes [7] then "switch" them over to the "church" of 7 See Reply Brief in Opposition U.S. 89-1367 Appendix C for exact details how this is achieved.

Scientology to sign release waivers to avoid all legal liability for its psuedo psychotherapy practices because of its "religious" immunities.

Part of this new and unique "bait trance and switch" 8 twist is done by promoting science, and comparisons Dianetic's effectiveness with that of psychotherapy 9.

The psychotherapy link in Scientology and Dianetic's is important. According to documents siezed in the authorized FBI search one of the major hidden goals of Scientology is to destroy the existing mental health organizations and take over the mental health field with themselves, now with them as the authorities. 10

The last time in history the mental health field was taken completely over was in Nazi Germany.

4.) Regarding punitives, the current court delay offers a unique opportunity to "get the big picture" and collect and coordinate all relevant information on Scientology's long term reoccuring pattern of dangerous COERCIVE activities both from our own national agencies and also from relevant international and foreign sources.

8 This "bait and switch" denies young adults the knowledge that it is the dangers of Scientology to which they are exposing themselves.

9 See exhibit 3Ø from my trial page 6 from "Reply to Brief in Opposition" No. 89-1367 "Scientology is the only validated psychotherapy in the world..." "Scientology is the first precision science..." The first science to put the cost of psychotherapy within the range of any persons pocketbook..." "The first science to contain an exact technology to routinely alleviate physical illness with predicable success".

1Ø See FBI search document Nov 3 1968 starting with "Dear Jane". This and similar documents demonstrate Scientology's goals of competing, not with other religions but those who sell psychotherapy and mental health services.

From the complete back drop of its antecedent history of abuse and complaints, and the case at hand, the restraining purpose and the imperative need for appropriate punitive damages for THIS "religion" becomes even more logical. This need for "strong medicine" punitives is additionally underscored by the particularly vile reprehensibility of the continuous abuse of the sacred trust of our First Amendment religious privileges. As an extreme example of abuse and religious despotism Scientology is the ideal candidate for validating the important purpose behind punitive damage assessments.

Furthermore, sheltered by its tremendous religious tax advantages Scientology's profits are far higher than most corporations. Without the restraining power of punitives its history of breaking adversaries and expensive harassing lawsuits could continue to be written off as just a normal and very minor cost of "doing business". Scientology knows only too well that the average citizen doesn't have the staying power to pay outrageous legal and security costs just to be civilized and to hold on through the legal process. 11

The rights of the average citizen need to be protected. Especially when fighting in court against protected and privileged mega wealthy tax free corporate organizations, PARTICULARLY when those organizations have a long term history of 11 In my case it has been estimated that Scientology's 10 year costs for legal, harassment, staged demonstrations, and detectives, etc has exceeded 50 million dollars, our costs have been about 1 - 1 1/2 million of which several hundred of thousands were for security. Also see Appendix A for new information regarding estimated weekly and annual income for Scientology from recent magazines published by Scientology.

adversarial harassment, but even more so when such organizations are striking out at their adversaries from behind the trust of the sacred religious constitutional "sanctuary".

Dept. of Justice/FBI
JEH Building #7176
Washington, D.C. 20535

62-116151-249
FEB 27 1991

Dear Mr. Sessions,

I'm writing to you concerning INTERPOL, the International Criminal Police Organization. The glorified image of INTERPOL portrayed on TV and in movies is that of an inter-governmental police force using the most modern means to track down the world's most sinister criminals. It may come as a surprise to you that INTERPOL is actually a private organization whose efficiency, usefulness and reliability is currently being questioned by law enforcement officials in the U.S. and abroad.

As your agency has representatives in INTERPOL, I want to bring to your attention the information in the enclosed publication, INTERPOL: Private Group, Public Menace.

INTERPOL has accumulated hundreds of thousands of dossiers on citizens, without their knowledge or consent, resulting in abuses of their privacy rights.

The 1988 U.S. Department of Justice Manual states, "INTERPOL is something of a legal curiosity... It is founded on a constitution written by a group of police officers who did not submit it for diplomatic signatures, nor have they ever submitted it for ratification by governments."

MAR 19 1991

The General Accounting Office has conducted two investigations into the U.S. branch of INTERPOL, called the United States National Central Bureau (USNCB). They found that INTERPOL-USNCB does not verify the accuracy of the information it transmits, and has set itself up to be almost entirely exempt from the Privacy Act.

OLIA

The GAO also found that "foreign police and National Central Bureaus make extensive use of non-Interpol channels in dealing with U.S. matters" as these other channels are "considered faster, more flexible... and more effective."

Growing concern over corrupt activities by INTERPOL officials and widespread recognition that INTERPOL is not a needed entity have resulted in investigations into INTERPOL internationally. (See Chapter 6.)

Our government pours over $5 million per year into INTERPOL, including the financing of INTERPOL headquarters in France and various substations in the Caribbean.

As noted in a January 21, 1985 memorandum from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, written after review of earlier Church publications on INTERPOL, "The church's various studies read well and show extensive research. They, in turn, indicate that Interpol is employing ex-Nazis, running on clandestine financing from interested governments and being utilized to acquire political information."

Is INTERPOL, with its many liabilities, really necessary? Is it worth the risk to the rights of citizens of this country when there are parallel law enforcement agencies that can do the job more effectively and without these risks?

Please read the enclosed booklet and let me know if there is any further information I can provide to you.

Sincerely,

Interpol: Private Group, Public Menace

If officials of the International Criminal Police Organization had their way, the name "Interpol" would conjure up pictures of James Bond-type characters, using the most modern means to track down the world's most sinister criminals.

Those familiar with Interpol's history and activities, however, know that this fictitious image is just that — pure fiction.

Many have described what this private police group really is and how it actually operates:

"Interpol cannot be sued in any court in the world. As a result, the organization is completely above the law and answerable to no one."

— Mourad Oussedik
French attorney and
expert on Interpol

"The peculiar thing is that Interpol has immunity as an Inter-Governmental Organization, while they are not such an organization.

"This puts them above the rules of privacy, especially those in relation to police. This is dangerous as it lays open the possibility of misuse of their system."

— Professor Douwe Korff
Dutch expert on international law

"Interpol's protective curtain enables fugitive Nazis, including those tried in absentia and convicted by various member-nations of Interpol, to remain at large, not only unmolested, but actually protected and guarded by local police organizations in charge of aliens."

— Ladislas Farago
American author

"Interpol cannot be sued in any court in the world. As a result, the organization is completely above the law and answerable to no one."

— Mourad Oussedik
French attorney and
expert on Interpol

"[T]he Nazis used Interpol's files, not to hunt down international criminals, but to other ends. They wanted these Interpol files of people formerly wanted or of people arrested once in other countries in order to use or abuse these people for political ends...."

— Simon Wiesenthal
Austrian Nazi hunter

"Interpol constantly undertakes measures that interfere with the rights of individuals (especially the extensive storage and transmission of personal data)...."

— Dr. Reinhard Riegel
West German government expert on data protection laws and individual rights

"... to many veteran law officers who have dealt with Interpol, it is a slow-moving, archaic bureaucracy which seldom performs useful work."

— Robert Walters
in Parade magazine

World leaders have pointed out what needs to be done:

"a. The status of Interpol with the Council of Europe should be reviewed;

"b. An inventory of transgressions committed by Interpol should be drawn up;

"c. Effective ways to control the International Criminal Police Organization, Interpol, in a democratic fashion should be considered ... so that Interpol hereafter will be accountable for its acts...."

— Motion for a Resolution by members of the Council of Europe

CHAPTER ONE

A Brief History of Interpol

> "Now what we do know is that the Nazis used Interpol's files, not to hunt down international criminals, but to other ends. They wanted these Interpol files of people formerly wanted or of people arrested once in other countries in order to use or abuse these people for political ends...."[1]
> — Simon Wiesenthal, famed Nazi hunter, Vienna, Austria

Around the turn of the century, European police began to encounter a new and difficult problem. A crime could occur in Paris, for example, and, a short time later, the perpetrator could be safely across the border in Germany. The speed of rail travel made this possible.

Beginning in 1904, French police made several attempts to establish a European central police force to combat the increasingly mobile criminal. In 1914, French efforts resulted in the First International Congress of Criminal Police, held in Monaco.

World War I interrupted any further efforts at centralization. After the war, the balance of European power changed. The Austro-Hungarian empire was split into several smaller countries, each with its own police force. All centralized records of the old empire, however, remained in Vienna, which became the center of much of Europe's cooperative police activity.

In 1923, the head of Vienna's police force invited the heads of European, North American, and South American police forces to an International Police Congress, which opened in Vienna on September 3 of that year. Approximately 130 delegates from 20 countries attended.

The congress recessed after agreeing to create the International Criminal Police Commission.[2] The group set up an office and had a cable designation of Interpol.

It was decided at the 1923 congress that the head of the Austrian police would automatically be the president of Interpol. Up until World War II, the group continued to be dominated by Austrians, who provided all of the funding and most of the executive personnel.

In the 1920s and early 1930s, Interpol functioned as a loose association through which police officials could get to know each other and share ideas.

Cooperation among its member police forces was informal. Few, if any, of them had the authority to bind their governments to any arrangements they might make. Nonetheless, cooperation occurred — as a former secretary general of Interpol, André Bossard, stated in 1985, "For a long time we operated as a sort of 'professional club.'"

The coming to power of the Nazis in Germany changed this basis of operation.

Nazi Domination

As early as 1936, the Nazis had a plan for using their Kriminalpolizei (or criminal police) for counterintelligence purposes. As shown during World War II, Interpol, under Nazi Germany, was a vital part of this plan.

[2] It was renamed the International Criminal Police Organization in 1956.

A Brief History of Interpol

Left: Gestapo Colonel Otto Steinhäusl, president of Interpol from 1938 to 1940. Right: Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Interpol president from 1943 to the end of the war, was hanged at Nuremberg for war crimes.

At 8 a.m. on March 12, 1938, Nazi Germany invaded Austria. By noon of the same day, Dr. Michael Skubl was removed from his positions of Austrian chief of police and president of Interpol by Heinrich Himmler, head of all of the German police and security forces, and placed under arrest. Himmler freed from prison one Otto Steinhäusl, a Nazi who had been imprisoned in Austria for several years, and made him the new chief of the Austrian police and the new Interpol president.

Steinhäusl was subsequently featured on the cover of the July 10, 1940, issue of Interpol's publication, the International Criminal Police Review, in his full uniform as a Gestapo colonel.

■ Interpol During World War II

During the war, Interpol was part of the Nazi genocide machine and its resources were used to round up minorities, including Jews and Gypsies, who were sent to death camps in Poland and elsewhere.

The June 1938 issue of International Criminal Police Review included a discussion of sterilization in which a Dr. Schutt of the Reich Ministry for Health was quoted as saying, "Only those should be rehabilitated who are found genetically healthy and worthy."

In the July and August 1938 issues of International Criminal Police Review, there were wanted notices for people described as "Jewish" or of the "Jewish type."

According to Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal, who spent years researching this subject, Interpol was also used to obtain the services of counterfeiters, forgers and spies.[3] As part of a Nazi plan to counterfeit British currency, for example, counterfeiters and forgers were rounded up, using information in Interpol's files.

The roll call of Nazis involved in Interpol during the war years includes such notorious figures as Heinrich Himmler, Reinhard Heydrich, Artur Nebe, and Ernst Kaltenbrunner.

Chief of the Gestapo from 1936 to 1945, Himmler was the "father" of the Nazified Interpol. He found in Interpol a vehicle to create and accumulate more of his cherished dossiers, containing intimate details on private individuals.

Left: Interpol's Artur Nebe directed "mobile killing units" that murdered some 45,000 people. Right: Nazi collaborator Florent Louwage was Interpol's first post-war president.

Heydrich, president of Interpol from 1940 through 1942, was known as "the Hangman." Among other atrocities in his career, he sponsored the infamous Wannsee Conference, during which 16 top Nazis, including Adolf Eichmann, gathered in Berlin's Wannsee suburb to map out the "final solution to the Jewish problem."

Scientology-1153

After Heydrich was killed by Czech patriots, Ernst Kaltenbrunner, a Nazi since 1932 who had been twice imprisoned, became Interpol's new president. While president, he reportedly enjoyed going to extermination camps to view various methods of killing — including hanging, shooting and the gas chamber.

Artur Nebe, a vice president of Interpol under Kaltenbrunner, directed Nazi "mobile killing units" that brought about the death of some 45,000 people, and assisted in Nazi "medical experiments."

Nebe's deeds included the wartime destruction of the Czech town of Lidice. Despite the denials of the Lidice inhabitants, Nebe asserted they had helped those who had killed Heydrich. He had all of the men and some of the women in the community shot; all of the babies had their throats slashed. The surviving women and children were shipped to two concentration camps.

After World War II

After the fall of the Nazi regime, Interpol's president, Kaltenbrunner, was hanged for war crimes in 1946. Later that year, representatives of 16 nations gathered in Belgium at Interpol's first post-war meeting to attempt a reconstruction.

Of the five officials in charge of calling the meeting, at least three had been involved in one way or another with the Nazis during World War II. These three were Florent Louwage of Belgium, Harry Soderman of Sweden, and Louis Ducloux of France.

Louwage worked for Interpol before the war, and continued to work for it throughout the Nazi occupation as a member of Interpol's permanent staff in Belgium.

Soderman, an expert forger and counterfeiter, worked closely with Interpol through the war years, becoming a permanent member of the Commission in 1942.

Ducloux served during the war with the Sûreté Nationale, a French political police organization which collaborated with the Nazis and suppressed Jews, the French resistance, and "political undesirables."

The heart of the Nazi system to control society was secret dossiers. Interpol today is built around its secret dossiers. It also maintains files on hundreds of thousands of private citizens from all over the world on its state-of-the-art computer.

Nazi President Paul Dickopf

In 1974, researchers for the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Social Justice (NCLE), an organization established by the Church of Scientology to protect citizens' rights against corrupt police actions, discovered that Paul Dickopf, Interpol's president from 1968 to 1972, had been a member of the Nazi SS[4] during the war.

Dickopf's personnel file contained his SS number (337259) and verification of his Nazi activities, including his membership in the Sicherheitsdienst (SD), the Nazi party's security service. It also held a 1939 photograph of Dickopf attired in his SS track suit.

When these facts were first publicly released in 1974, Interpol denied the story outright. The group's then secretary general, Jean Nepote, who had himself been a police official with the collaborationist government that ruled France under the Nazis during World War II, asserted that the information was false or that the researchers had identified the "wrong man."

Interpol subsequently changed its story in 1975 and admitted Dickopf's SS membership. Its new claim was that the membership had been involuntary. As historians will attest, however, there was no such thing as involuntary membership in the SS.

According to a secret report of the German Federal Criminal Office, released to the news media in 1988, Dickopf had pretended to be a Nazi opponent, and used this position as a cover during the war and later.

The report had been written by Helmut Prante, a former department chief with the Federal Criminal Office, who had worked directly under Dickopf.[5] Prante had examined the written records of his boss of many years and concluded that Dickopf's personal effects clearly showed the SS man had carefully constructed his cover as a "Nazi opponent."

Professor Armand Mergen stated in his book, The BKA[6] Story, "Today, I know that Dickopf was a double agent who never quite dropped his oath from the time he was an SS Untersturmbandfuehrer [a high-ranking SS leader] and Abwehroffizier [counter-intelligence officer]."

According to the BKA documents released in 1988, Dickopf had supposedly gone into hiding in 1942, but was still receiving his pay as an SS officer and Abwehroffizier in 1944.

Paul Dickopf, shown in his Nazi SS track suit in 1939, and as the retiring president of Interpol in 1972.

In a letter to FREEDOM Magazine on March 14, 1975, Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal wrote that Paul Dickopf "always refused to support the German authorities of justice in prosecuting Nazi criminals. In the direction of the German section of Interpol, there are also other persons with an SS past."

■ "For Political Ends"

Wiesenthal also described an important aspect of the Nazi takeover of Interpol:

"Now what we do know is that the Nazis used Interpol's files, not to hunt down international criminals, but to other ends. They wanted these Interpol files of people formerly wanted or of people arrested once in other countries in order to use or abuse these people for political ends...."

The heart of the Nazi system to control society was secret dossiers. These were maintained on all groups and individuals who, for example, might disagree with psychiatric theories on race or who had Jewish or international connections. Groups that fell into these categories, such as the Seventh-day Adventists, Baptists, Christian Scientists, the Theosophical Society, the Old Catholic Church, and others, were prohibited by a secret directive issued by Reinhard Heydrich on February 15, 1938.

Interpol today is built around its secret dossiers. Its files on hundreds of thousands of private citizens from all over the world are now maintained on its state-of-the-art computer. Information compiled by Interpol headquarters is withheld from all individuals, groups, and governments, including that of its host country, France.

A Nazi mentality has continued to pervade the secret, closed world of Interpol. Now and again, however, the covering shroud slips up from around this secret world.

In the June/July 1986 issue of the International Criminal Police Review, for example, Secretary General Raymond Kendall quoted the words of Florent Louwage, Nazi collaborator and former president of Interpol: "The view expressed by Mr. Louwage, the first president of the resuscitated International Criminal Police Commission in the 3rd (December 1946) issue of our Review still rings true today: 'Not one ... state throughout the world may assume the responsibility of refraining from cooperation with our Commission.'"▲

CHAPTER TWO

Interpol's Structure and Operation

▶ "Interpol cannot be sued in any court in the world. As a result, the organization is completely above the law and answerable to no one."

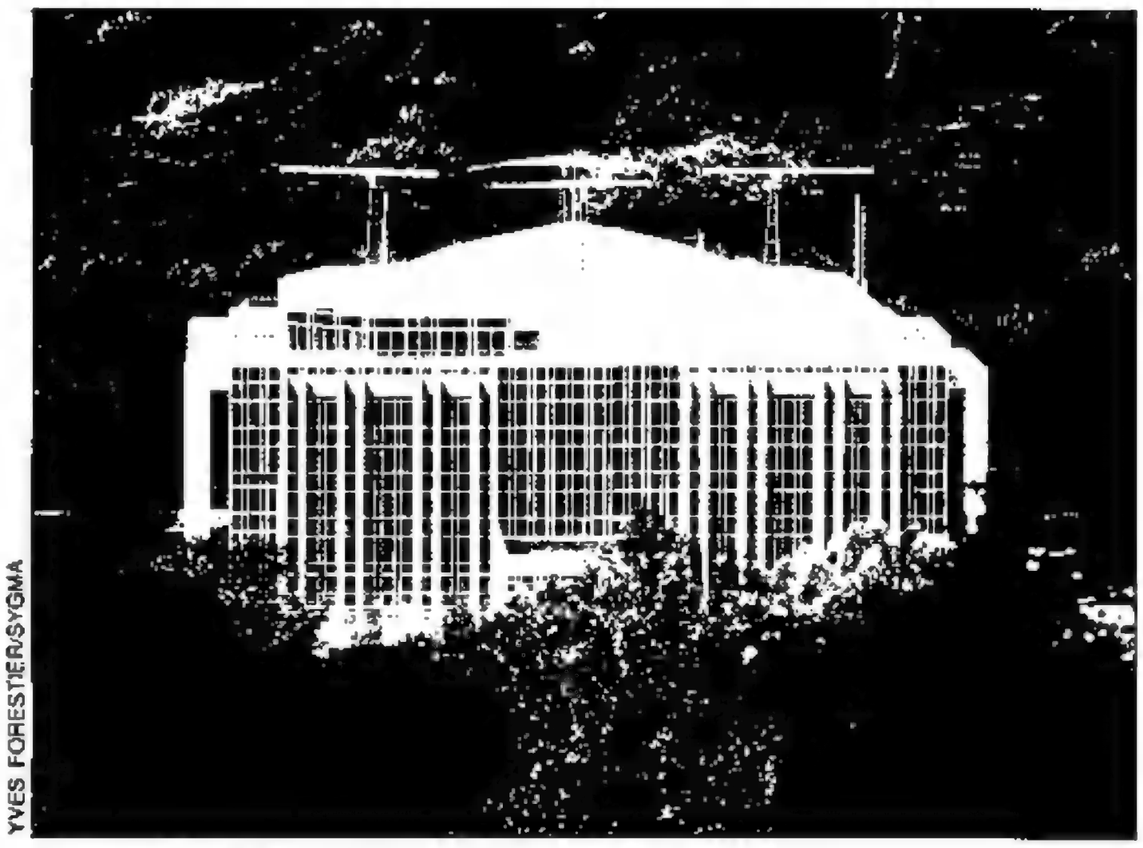
— Mourad Oussedik, noted attorney and expert on Interpol, Paris, France

Interpol is a private quasi-police group that is not subject to the direction, review or authority of any government.

The majority of its work is done at the level of its National Central Bureaus (NCBs), Interpol's offices in the member countries. As of early 1990, Interpol consisted of the national law enforcement bodies of 150 nations.

The 1988 U.S. Department of Justice Manual describes Interpol in the following manner:

"Interpol is something of a legal curiosity. It conducts intergovernmental activities, but it is not based on an international treaty, convention, or similar legal instrument. It is founded on a constitution written by a group of police officers who did not submit it for diplomatic signatures, nor have they ever submitted it for ratification by governments."



YVES FORESTIER/SYGMA

As noted by a U.S. court[1] in a defamation action brought by an American citizen against Interpol headquarters, "Interpol appears to occupy a rather ambiguous and shadowy existence in this country."

Interpol's Structure

Interpol is constituted in four echelons:

1. The General Secretariat. Interpol's central offices in Lyon are referred to as the General Secretariat. This is Interpol's most powerful section and contains the group's permanent staff (numbering approximately 260, including 90 police officers from 36 countries).

The General Secretariat is administered by the secretary general, who is the chief executive officer of Interpol. He is nominated by the General Assembly (see number 2 below) and serves a five-year term.

The General Secretariat maintains massive volumes of information on private citizens gathered from around the world and transmitted to France. Its operations are financially supported by dues and other payments from its member NCBs.

Interpol's Structure and Operation

The General Secretariat consists of four divisions, as follows:

A. Division I (General Administration). This division deals with finance and accounts, personnel matters, supplies, logistics and security.

B. Division II (Police Division). This is where information on cases under investigation in member countries is centralized.

The Police Division has three main subdivisions, each of which deals with different types of crime: general offenses against persons or property (including international terrorism), economic and financial crimes, and illicit drug trafficking. In addition to these three subdivisions, there is a section that handles the financial assets derived from criminal activities that reports directly to the head of the Police Division.

C. Division III has three subdivisions, including the organization's legal department. This division provides legal and technical reference services both for member countries and Division II. The Interpol journal, International Criminal Police Review, is published by this division.

D. Division IV handles the group's telecommunications, files, and data processing.

2. The General Assembly. Representatives of the member police forces meet every year in a General Assembly. Here, such matters as election of officers, decisions regarding policy, admission of new members, and approval of budgets occur. The General Assembly, according to Article 6 of Interpol's Constitution, is the "supreme authority" of Interpol.

3. The Executive Committee. The General Assembly elects the 13 members of the Executive Committee: the president, four vice presidents, and eight delegates. Its membership is derived exclusively from delegates to the General Assembly.

It is required that the members of the Executive Committee be from different countries. Their duties include supervision of the decisions of the General Assembly, agenda preparation, submission of proposals to the General Assembly for votes, and supervision of the secretary general's administration of the General Secretariat. Basically, the Executive Committee is the governing body elected by the General Assembly.

4. National Central Bureaus. Each member police force allocates space, supplies, and personnel to serve as a liaison point for Interpol communications and requests in that country. This operation is known as each member nation's National Central Bureau, or NCB.

The information gathered by NCBs is shared with member countries around the world through a system of computerized dossiers. Requests for and transmissions of information from these dossiers go directly from one country's NCB to another country's NCB, and are routinely copied to Interpol headquarters in France.

Under such a system, there is no external control or oversight concerning the transmission of information on private citizens. According to court records and media accounts, this has resulted in (a) repeated instances of privacy invasion, (b) dossier collections, not related to wrongdoing, being kept on law-abiding citizens, and (c) sensitive information falling into the wrong hands, even at times when people's lives have been at stake.

An example of sensitive information being given to Interpol and then finding its way to where it could have caused serious loss of life is featured in the 1977 book Entebbe Rescue, by Israeli journalists Yeshayahu Ben-Porat, Eitan Haber and Zeev Schiff. The book is about the rescue by Israeli commandos of the hostages seized and held at Entebbe airport, Uganda, by Arab terrorists.

The authors stated, "Israel asked Interpol to help, and forwarded secret information to their Paris headquarters, only to discover that the Arabs had gotten ahold of it and they in turn had passed it on to the terrorist organizations."

■ Interpol's Finances

According to Article 38 of Interpol's Constitution, the group's resources are provided by "(a) the financial contributions from Members; and (b) gifts, bequests, subsidies, grants and other resources after these have been accepted or approved by the Executive Committee."

Member countries are assigned to a budget "group," or status, based on population, national standard of living, the use made of Interpol's services, the benefit derived therefrom, and the country's financial resources.

The budget group to which a member country is assigned is decided upon by the country itself, although the choice must be ratified by Interpol's Executive Committee.

Scientology-1158

The Executive Committee proposes the annual budget which is ratified or not by the General Assembly. The Executive Committee and secretary general implement the budget in the following fiscal year.

Each year, Interpol is audited by an external accounting firm whose report goes to the president and secretary general, and is presented to the General Assembly. The report, and other details of Interpol's finances, are not made public — the group answers to no one outside itself.

Headquarters Agreement Makes Interpol Immune From Lawsuits

In the late 1970s, Interpol became the target of a number of civil rights-oriented lawsuits. In an attempt to avoid liability, Interpol began negotiations with the French government on what later became known as the "Interpol Headquarters Agreement," or "seat agreement."

Through its negotiations, Interpol sought complete immunity under French law from all legal liability for itself and its officers. It also sought to shield its files from any requirement of disclosure, and to make its General Secretariat "inviolate." In effect, Interpol sought to shelter itself from the responsibility of having to answer to any government on earth.

The "seat agreement" provides Interpol headquarters with complete immunity for its staff and property, and its massive files and dossiers on private citizens are shielded from legal examination.

The agreement that was finally ratified gave Interpol practically everything it had sought. It went into effect February 14, 1984.

In the April 1985 issue of its official magazine, the International Criminal Police Review, Interpol announced the granting of the seat agreement. The article acknowledged that a key reason for seeking this immunity was due to the organization becoming the subject of a number of lawsuits in which civil damages against Interpol were sought.

The men primarily responsible for pushing through this agreement were Interpol's then president, Jolly Bugarin, and its then secretary general, André Bossard. Representing the French government were André Lewin, director of the United Nations and International Organizations Section of France's Ministry of External Relations, and Christian Nucci, minister of cooperation and development.

UNITED NATIONS

Then U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim (right) with André Lewin, his personal aide, in 1975, the year the U.N. granted Interpol its Inter-Governmental Organization status. Lewin later became a minister of the French government and co-signed the Interpol Headquarters Agreement in 1982. Press accounts in 1987 exposed Waldheim as a Nazi officer during World War II.

"We Also Use Criminals"

Bugarin, Interpol's president from 1980 through 1984, was chief of the Philippines' Civilian National Bureau of Investigation and head of the Filipino Interpol office under then President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Civilian National Bureau of Investigation was responsible for the protection of Marcos' political opponent, Benigno Aquino Jr. However, Aquino was shot on August 21, 1983, the moment he stepped off an airplane onto Filipino soil. Aquino's assassination started a chain of events that culminated in Marcos' fall from power.

In 1984, Bugarin was implicated in an attempt to cover up the fact that one of the assassins was a known criminal who had been a member of Bugarin's police bureau for 13 years.

When asked by a panel investigating the murder why he would hire a man who had admitted to killing more than 30 people, Bugarin, as reported by Associated Press on February 7, 1984, responded, "In the fight against crime, we also use criminals."

Bugarin left his government post with the rest of the Marcos regime in 1986, after completing his four-year term as president of Interpol.

According to July 4, 1988, wire stories by Reuters and United Press International, Bugarin also ordered one of his subordinates to suppress evidence in the Aquino murder case.

An Air of Legitimacy

Prior to André Lewin's term of service with the French government, he served as personal aide to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. In 1987, Waldheim was exposed as a former Nazi officer during World War II.[2] Later that same year, Lewin was denied the position of French ambassador to Waldheim's Austria, on the basis of his previous ties with Waldheim.

Scientology-1159

Prior to Waldheim's exposure as a former Nazi, he was responsible in July 1975 for the United Nations Economic and Social Council granting Interpol the status of an Inter-Governmental Organization (IGO). This status facilitated Interpol's international operations and gave it a much-sought-after air of legitimacy. In 1982, Waldheim publicly reconfirmed this status, according to Interpol's International Criminal Police Review.

The individual most instrumental in getting the Interpol Headquarters Agreement ratified by the French legislature was Christian Nucci[3], head of the French ministry of cooperation and development. In 1983, he maneuvered the legislation in such a way that only five of 400 legislators were present when it was submitted for ratification.

The resultant "seat agreement" provides Interpol headquarters with complete immunity for its staff and its property, and its massive files and dossiers on private citizens are shielded from legal examination.

[2] Waldheim, who tried to conceal his wartime activities, has been barred from entering the United States by the U.S. Justice Department because of his Nazi past.

[3] In 1989, Nucci was charged with fraud and embezzlement in connection with the alleged misuse of more than 5 million francs ($830,000 in U.S. currency) of French government money, which he reportedly diverted to his personal campaign fund.

The United States' View of Interpol

In a 1981 internal memorandum, Larry Simms, then deputy assistant U.S. attorney general, wrote that "Interpol, as an organization, occupies a somewhat anomalous position under our law, as it was not established by treaty or protocol, and is not generally accorded status as an international organization."

Simms' memorandum described conflicts that could arise because of the differing rights accorded the privacy of individuals under United States law and under the laws of other member countries of Interpol.

He concluded that significant difficulty could be encountered by an individual seeking legal redress against Interpol or a member country, as one of the first issues to be resolved would be which country's law, if any, could be applied.

The issue, the memorandum stated, becomes even more complex if information about an individual is first transmitted through Interpol's headquarters before being abused in a member country. The document concluded, "There are a number of possible international conflicts of law issues raised by the United States' participation in Interpol generally."

Despite these forebodings, on June 16, 1983, then U.S. President Ronald Reagan issued Executive Order 12425, providing Interpol headquarters, its officers and employees, complete immunity from any lawsuits in the United States.

MALANCA/SIPA

Christian Nucci maneuvered the Interpol Headquarters Agreement through the French parliament when only five out of more than 400 members were present. In 1989, Nucci was charged with fraud and embezzlement in connection with the misuse of more than 5 million francs of French government money.

Mourad Oussedik, a noted French attorney who has worked on Interpol-related civil rights cases for a number of years, pointed out that the headquarters agreement "legally prevents any outside agency from examining Interpol's archives or any of the dossiers and information currently being retained by the organization."[4]

Oussedik noted the dangers posed by the agreement, stating, "Any National Central Bureau can shelter its records by sending them to headquarters, and Interpol cannot be sued in any court in the world. As a result, the organization is completely above the law and answerable to no one."▲

[4] These statements from Mr. Oussedik appeared in the March/April 1989 issue of FREEDOM Magazine, published by the Church of Scientology.

Interpol and Drug Trafficking

Suspicions of Interpol's involvement in drug trafficking arose from observations of the group's ineffectiveness in handling the problem.

According to Interpol's own publications and pamphlets from 1989, the control of drug trafficking is the organization's number one priority, yet there has been no significant record of arrests or curtailment of the world drug trade — even in the 1970s, when the major drug routes of the world ran past Interpol's front door, through the heroin labs of Marseilles.

A 1976 GAO investigation of U.S. involvement in Interpol found that most Interpol arrest cases involved young Americans or U.S. servicemen arrested overseas with small quantities of drugs such as marijuana. Very few of the arrests involved major traffickers or suppliers.

The French Connection

In at least one case where there was a large volume of drugs seized, Interpol refused to do anything.

This incident began in May 1971, when U.S. Customs agents in New Jersey discovered 96 pounds of pure heroin in the panels of a Volkswagen camper. A Frenchman named Roger Delouette was arrested when he attempted to pick up the vehicle from Customs.

During this incident, Delouette claimed to be working for the SDECE (Service de Documentation Extérieure et du Contre-Espionage, the French intelligence and counterespionage agency), and said that he had been recruited for the job by Paul Fournier. Fournier was the cover name for Paul Ferrere, an official of SDECE who had worked in French Indochina in the 1950's during the French takeover of the opium trade.

Delouette stated that he had run errands all over the world for SDECE since 1948.

French officials, including the head of Interpol's French NCB, publicly denounced Delouette's story.

Nevertheless, an American grand jury indicted Ferrere for his alleged involvement in the crime. Some time later, a member of another French intelligence department publicly admitted that Fournier was indeed Ferrere, and that Delouette had been working for him.

U.S. officials sent evidence of Ferrere's complicity to Interpol France, but Interpol officials refused to take any action.

The Swiss Connection

In January 1988, the Central Police Bureau of Switzerland issued a confidential report showing that the Shakarchi Trading Company, a Lebanese precious metals firm, had been serving as a front for massive money-laundering activities, reportedly involving Iran/Contragate principal Richard Secord and others.

A vice president of Shakarchi Trading, Hanns W. Kopp, quickly resigned his position after news of the operation broke. Kopp's wife, Elisabeth, was the Swiss minister of justice and was also in charge of Switzerland's Interpol NCB and Central Police Bureau.

Shortly thereafter, when allegations arose that Mrs. Kopp had used her position to alert her husband to the pending investigation, she resigned her post.

Interpol in Latin America

In Latin America, clues concerning Interpol's involvement in the international drug trade began to surface as early as 1970.

...extradition ...France for his wartime crimes, but also from extradition to Peru for post-war criminal matters such as currency speculation and smuggling.

In April that year, two members of the U.S. State Department's Agency for International Development (AID) investigated the condition of drug law enforcement in Bolivia. Their report noted that two previous Interpol chiefs had been arrested for trafficking in cocaine.

They did not know at the time that their discovery was the tip of the iceberg of Interpol's complicity with and involvement in South American drug trafficking.

Bolivia Becomes Nazi's Haven

Klaus Barbie, the notorious wartime Gestapo chief of Lyon, had taken up residence in Bolivia under the alias of Klaus Altmann. In the 1970s, he began a program of official cooperation with the Bolivian government and unofficial cooperation with Bolivia's Interpol office.

Barbie was protected by Interpol not only from extradition to France for his wartime crimes, but also from extradition to Peru for post-war criminal matters such as currency speculation and smuggling.

In 1982, Interpol rejected a French request to relay an arrest warrant on Barbie.

According to numerous press accounts, Barbie was active as an arms trafficker and was a linchpin in Bolivia's thriving drug business. He gave advice on torture and interrogation methods to Bolivia's untrained police force while also running a terrorist group called the Bridegrooms of Death, the purpose of which was to squelch any prospective rivals in the cocaine trade.

Barbie Intimate With Bolivian Interpol Chief

Barbie was also a frequent visitor to Interpol's Bolivia office according to Serge Klarsfeld, a noted international Nazi hunter and the man responsible, perhaps more than anyone else, for bringing Barbie to justice. Klarsfeld stated, "According to my information, he [Barbie] was very close to the Interpol representative in Bolivia.

"I know that he was very often in his office and that the wires of the organization were very available for him to read. This allowed him to know about a lot of cases concerning, if not himself, other persons suspected or accused of different sorts of crimes such as drug trafficking."

Interpol Head Indicted On Drug Charges

In July 1980, General Luis Garcia Meza staged the 189th coup in Bolivia's 144 years of independence. The Miami Herald called it "the cocaine coup," and it was widely publicized as being financed by one of the Bolivian drug cartels.

Within months of Garcia's coup, Barbie was given a five-year security pass as director of a company devoted to building a navy for the landlocked Bolivia.

The signature on Barbie's pass was that of the minister of interior for General Garcia, Colonel Luis Arce Gomez. Arce was in charge of the Bolivian Interpol office.

Arce was forced to resign his posts in February 1981 because of American pressure, and was indicted in April 1983 by a federal grand jury in Miami for conspiracy to export cocaine to the United States.

Another Interpol Chief Resigns

In 1987, the then head of Interpol in Bolivia, Fernando Barthelemy, became that country's fourth Interpol chief to be linked to drug trafficking.

Barthelemy resigned his post in February that year in the face of charges that he was on the drug dealers' payroll.

Ecuadorian Interpol Office Provides Protection For Drug Traffickers

Another example of corruption under the aegis of Interpol is the case of Luis Rivadeneira of Ecuador. Rivadeneira was arrested in December 1974 in Ecuador with two kilos of cocaine paste in his possession.

On April 21, 1975, The New York Times reported that soon after Rivadeneira's arrest, Ecuador's Admiral Alfredo Poveda Burbano, head of law enforcement and in charge of Interpol's office in that country, called the police and ordered them to alter the evidence against Rivadeneira. Rivadeneira was a close friend of one of the admiral's relatives.

The police did as they were told, dropped the charges, and Rivadeneira went free.

Peruvian Interpol Chief Convicted and Sentenced For Cocaine Trafficking

From 1981 until 1988, General José Jorge Zarate was the Interpol chief of Peru.

During the time he was in this position, in 1985, he was arrested for drug trafficking. In 1987, he was indicted.

He remained Interpol chief of Peru, however, until April 1988. In June 1989, he was convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison for transporting cocaine, using his own yacht.

Interpol Implicated in Torture and Murder

In July 1986, U.S. military advisers and Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents landed in South America for a direct military assault on drug bases in the Bolivian mountains.

Although the raids were considered a limited success, DEA agents later determined that in the days preceding the raid, there had been a massive exodus of traffickers and aircraft to Panama, controlled by Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega, an acknowledged international drug trafficker.

Two years later, in February 1988, Noriega was himself accused in a U.S. indictment of utilizing his official position "to facilitate the manufacture and transportation of large quantities of cocaine destined for the United States and to launder narcotics proceeds."

Incredibly, in 1978, Noriega, who was then the Interpol delegate from Panama, was appointed to head up Interpol's first Drug Division.

He was elected to this position by Interpol's General Assembly, and placed in charge of handling the international drug trafficking situation. In 1978, it had long been known that Noriega himself had been heavily involved in drug trafficking, and this was a matter of record in U.S. government files.

According to Noriega's former counsel, José Blandon, Noriega's Interpol chief, Lieutenant Colonel Nivaldo Madriñan, was one of the two men close to Noriega who actually controlled Noriega's drug trafficking activities.

In his 1988 testimony before the U.S. Senate hearings held by the Subcommittee on Narcotics, Terrorism and International Operations, Blandon reported on Madriñan's involvement with a team of murderers used by Noriega against people who opposed him. Blandon stated that Madriñan was involved in several "unsolved murders."

According to Guillermo Sanchez, a journalist formerly with La Prensa in Panama who investigated one such murder (the sadistic slaying of former Panamanian Deputy Minister of Health Hugo Spadafora), an eyewitness confirmed that Spadafora was tortured and beheaded at Madriñan's farm in Panama, after being kidnapped at the border between Panama and Costa Rica.

Madriñan had previously been implicated in the 1983 murder of Serafin Mitrotti, one of the most active opponents of drug trafficking in Panama. According to Bosco Vallorino, spokesman for the Panamanian embassy in Washington, D.C., Colonel Roberto Diaz Herrera, the former chief of staff and Noriega's second-in-command, has confirmed that Madriñan ordered that Mitrotti be killed to silence his anti-drug efforts. Diaz Herrera also submitted a signed, sworn statement to this effect to the Organization of American States (OAS), which was conducting an investigation into the deaths of Spadafora and Mitrotti.

Nivaldo Madriñan (left) the former Panamanian Interpol head, is said to have run the country's multibillion-dollar drug smuggling operation and has been implicated in torture and murder. Manuel Noriega (right), who once headed Interpol's Drug Division, has been charged with drug trafficking and money laundering on a massive scale.

On November 27, 1989, Madriñan attended a five-day Interpol General Assembly meeting in Lyon, France. His attendance as the Interpol delegate from Panama was heavily protested by many Panamanians living in the United States in self-exile. For example, the owner of the Panamanian newspaper La Prensa, who was living in self-exile in Miami at the time but who recently returned to Panama, wrote to the president of France, François Mitterand, protesting Madriñan's presence at the Interpol General Assembly.

As another example, Dr. Miguel Bernal, a constitutional and international lawyer formerly with the University of Panama, but currently at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, sent a letter on November 27, 1989, to Interpol Executive Committee member Richard C. Stiener (who is also the U.S. delegate to Interpol) who was at Lyon at the time attending the General Assembly meeting. Dr. Bernal stated in his letter:

"[E]vidence of Madriñan's criminal activity exists.... Madriñan is personally worth over $7 million (bank records exist in the possession of various individuals in the United States). How does he have this much money on a salary of $1,200?"

Despite the protests and warnings from Panamanians who had first-hand knowledge and dealings with Madriñan, he was welcomed at the Interpol convention and allowed to attend its closed conferences on drug enforcement activity and other matters under discussion at the Interpol headquarters.

Madriñan returned to Panama, where he remained in charge of all Interpol operations in that country, including the receipt of Interpol's Weekly Drug Intelligence Message that has gone out to all member countries since 1981. This publication is a summary of all drug-related police activity Interpol was involved in during the previous week. It covers such subjects as methods of concealment, actual drug trafficking routes, and statistics on seizures of drugs.

Incredibly, in 1978, Noriega, who was then the Interpol delegate from Panama, was appointed to head Interpol's first Drug Division. At that time it had long been known that Noriega himself had been heavily involved in drug trafficking, and this was a matter of record in U.S. government files.

In December 1989, when the United States invaded Panama and ousted Noriega, Madriñan ran for sanctuary into the Vatican Nunciature in Panama City, either with Noriega, or shortly before him.[Per The Washington Post, it was probably before.]

After Noriega turned himself over to U.S. forces, Madriñan did the same. Madriñan was held at Fort Clayton, a U.S. military base in Panama. Madriñan has been charged with murder by the Mitrotti family, and will face a Panamanian trial for his actions.

Among the bizarre paraphernalia found in Noriega's office and living area after his flight were Nazi memorabilia — including a statue and a large photograph of Adolf Hitler and a library of books devoted to Nazism, Hitler and Fascism.

Information to Drug Cartel

Buried in the 1988 U.S. indictment of Noriega is this revealing charge: "Noriega agreed to permit members of the cartel and others to continue their narcotics business within the borders of Panama and to notify them if and when any law enforcement action was to be taken against them." (emphasis added)

With easy access to Interpol data through Madriñan, Noriega would have no difficulty keeping his promise.

Colombian Drug Cartel Members Given Shelter by Interpol

Shortly after Colombia began its August 1989 war on the Medellín drug cartel, the head of Panama's Interpol office, Madriñan, offered refuge to cartel members. This is according to reporters from USA Today and The Washington Times, who were in Panama at the time and who had interviewed authoritative sources with access to intelligence information.

The refuge was allegedly negotiated at Panama City's Tocumen air base between representatives of the cartel and two Panamanian officials, led by Madriñan.

FREEDOM Magazine conducted exclusive interviews with former Panamanians who had detailed knowledge of Panama's drug trade, and Interpol's involvement in it.

One of these, Lieutenant Colonel Carlos Worrel, who served for 26 years with the Panamanian military, told FREEDOM that Madriñan and his assistant, Lieutenant Colonel Lucinio Miranda, smuggled cocaine from a picture frame business in Panama City by stuffing the drug into hollow frames, then shipping the frames to Spain and France.

AP/WIDE WORLD PHOTOS

Miguel Aldana Ibarra was indicted in January 1990 in the United States for participating in the February 1985 murder of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar. At the time of the murder, Aldana was Mexico's Interpol chief.

FREEDOM reported, "Lt. Col. Worrel also charged that information designed to assist drug smuggling has been exchanged between the Interpol offices of Colombia and Panama."

Worrel told FREEDOM, "Nivaldo Madriñan was receiving telexes in his Interpol office in Panama from Interpol Colombia which showed him the exact drug trafficking routes. Madriñan would then get a kickback from the traffickers, and allow the drugs to pass."

In 1984, for example, while serving in the Panamanian Defense Force, Worrel said he saw a telex arrive in Madriñan's Interpol office from Interpol Colombia, notifying Madriñan that a shipment of cocaine was heading his way by boat.

Worrel reported that the telex stated Colombian Interpol agents had allowed the shipment to slip through, and that since Madriñan would get his cut of the profit, he should let it go through, too.

Mexican Interpol Chiefs Charged with Drug Trafficking, Murder

Miguel Aldana Ibarra had been the Interpol chief in Mexico until 1985. He disappeared "practically overnight," in the words of one official, when U.S. agents revealed he had taken a bribe from drug traffickers.

On July 6, 1989, the Mexican attorney general's office opened an investigation into Aldana for corruption, drug trafficking, and possible involvement in the murder of a journalist in Mexico who was exposing drug trafficking in the country.

On January 30, 1990, Aldana was indicted by a federal grand jury in Los Angeles on charges of participating in the murder of U.S. DEA agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Florentino Ventura replaced Aldana as Mexico's Interpol chief in 1985. He served until September 1988, when he committed suicide.

After Ventura's death, it was revealed that he had been a member of a devil-worshipping group, the Palo Mayombe, that drew international notoriety for its crimes of drug smuggling and ritual murder. The group, operating in Northern Mexico, has been linked to as many as 15 brutal killings.

Just prior to his suicide, Interpol chief Ventura murdered his own wife and another woman.

In January 1989, during the San Diego trial of seven men accused of smuggling cocaine into the United States, a witness in the trial, David Wheeler, stated that the director of most of the illicit drug trafficking in Mexico had been Florentino Ventura.

Zia and Noriega Given Interpol Awards Despite Involvement in Drug Trade

While Interpol has been completely ineffective in stopping the drug trade, the group's secretary general, Raymond Kendall, has given Interpol awards to two men who have themselves been connected with international narcotics trafficking on a massive scale — General Mohammad Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan and Noriega of Panama — commending them for their supposed work against drug trafficking.

In July 1977, when Zia seized power in Pakistan in a military coup, heroin was virtually unknown in the country.

By 1984, just seven years later, Pakistan was furnishing 70 percent of Current Interpol Secretary General Raymond Kendall. He presented medals to Zia (1986) and Noriega (1987), both of whom have been involved in world drug trade, for their supposed effectiveness in fighting drug trafficking.

Reports from 1982 onward showed that Pakistan's Mohammad Zia ul-Haq was involved in heroin trafficking on a massive scale. In 1986, Interpol gave him a medal for fighting drug trafficking.

Elisabeth Kopp resigned as the Swiss minister in charge of Interpol following allegations that she alerted her husband to a forthcoming investigation into drug and money-laundering activities.

the world's supply of the drug, according to European police sources who wish to remain anonymous.

In January 1986, Interpol Secretary General Kendall gave Zia an Interpol medal for "diligence in fighting drug trafficking" — at a time when Interpol had numerous reports of Zia's involvement in the massive heroin trade generated from his country.

A news media reporter who requested that his identity be protected spent a considerable time in Pakistan probing the heroin trade and found that as early as 1982, long before Interpol gave Zia the award, reports of Zia's involvement in drug trafficking had reached Interpol headquarters.

European police chiefs with whom the reporter spoke stated that the reports had been ignored.

In April 1987, Kendall presented Panama's Manuel Noriega with the group's highest award, the Bronze Medal, for "international effectiveness in combating drug trafficking."

The award was given to Noriega not long before he was indicted in the United States for his role in drug trafficking.

■ Summary of Interpol's Involvement In Drug Trafficking

An overview of Interpol's record shows that:

- Four Bolivian Interpol chiefs have been involved in drug trafficking or linked to drug traffickers.
- A Nazi war criminal, while directing drug trafficking activities in Bolivia, was protected by Interpol.
- An Ecuadorian Interpol head is known to have provided favors to local drug traffickers.
- The Peruvian Interpol chief from 1981 to 1988 was convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison for drug trafficking.
- An Interpol chief in Panama was tied to the Medellín drug cartel and was also directly involved in drug trafficking on a massive scale. He is now being held in Panama by U.S. troops, charged with murder.
- Two Mexican Interpol chiefs have been accused of running the drug trade in their country.

One of these Mexican Interpol chiefs killed his wife, another woman, and then himself; the other was recently charged with involvement in the murder of a DEA agent.

- The former dictator of Panama and the former ruler of Pakistan, both having records of involvement in the world's drug trade, inexplicably received Interpol awards for international effectiveness in combating drug trafficking. The former Panamanian dictator has been extradited to the United States and is facing drug trafficking charges.

John Alderson, an honorary research fellow at Exeter University's Centre for Police and Criminal Justice Studies and a former chief constable of Devon and Cornwall in England, called in April 1989 for an elite Euro-police force to combat terrorism, arms running, drug smuggling and international fraud when border controls are relaxed in 1992.

According to a Daily Telegraph article of April 5, 1989, Alderson, at an international seminar on European crime for the 12 European Economic Community (EEC) states, described Interpol as an unsatisfactory body not properly accountable to the democratic process. ▲

CHAPTER FOUR

Interpol's Involvement in Politics

"Interpol's protective curtain enables fugitive Nazis, including those tried in absentia and convicted by various member-nations of Interpol, to remain at large, not only unmolested, but actually protected and guarded by local police organizations in charge of aliens."

— Ladislas Farago, Author

After World War II, trials held in Nuremberg convicted many Nazis of heinous war crimes. Among those convicted were Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Interpol president from 1943 until his death by hanging in 1946.

Many other Nazis fled Germany, adopting new lives and identities elsewhere, using the spoils of Europe to buy safety and privacy.

The search for the most notorious Nazis became a priority for the Western world — but not for Interpol.

As noted by many authors, Nazi hunters, and historians, Interpol has consistently refused to assist with the pursuit or apprehension of Nazi war criminals. The group cites Article 3 of its constitution as the reason. That article states:

"It is strictly forbidden for the organization to undertake any intervention or activities of a political, military, religious, or racial character."

However, on other occasions, Interpol has chosen to involve itself in political, religious and racial matters.

Nazis Shielded From Prosecution

Writing in the September 1961 issue of World Jewry, S.J. Roth stated, "When it classified Nazi crimes as falling under these categories [political, military, religious or racial], Interpol was hopelessly wrong legally and also set up a dangerous political precedent."

He noted, "[T]he world will be at a loss to understand why the police should be insensitive to crimes which the governments of their countries condemn."

The World Jewish Congress[1] passed a resolution in 1961 asking Interpol to stop classifying Nazi war crimes as political offenses. That same year, spokesmen for the World Jewish Congress also asked Interpol to bring this matter before the Interpol General Assembly. The Congress was turned down on both requests.

It has been documented that Interpol has actually gone beyond the point of merely not cooperating with searches for Nazis.

Author and Nazi hunter Ladislas Farago stated in 1976 that during his pursuit of Martin Bormann in South America, he established contacts with Interpol officials in such countries as Brazil, Argentina, Peru and Paraguay.

"In connection with my project," he said, "I had ample opportunity of ascertaining that they were ... actually protecting Nazi fugitives in South America, preventing rather than facilitating and/or expediting their apprehension and extradition.

"The result is that Interpol's protective curtain enables fugitive Nazis, including those tried in absentia and convicted by various member-nations of Interpol, to remain at large, not only unmolested, but actually protected and guarded by local police organizations in charge of aliens."

Interpol Intervened To Help Josef Mengele And Klaus Barbie

As examples, Farago cited the cases of Josef Mengele and Klaus Barbie, alias Klaus Altmann.

In a letter in 1976, Farago wrote, "Even when the extradition of Barbie-alias-Altmann was demanded, not by France on war criminal charges, but by neighboring Peru [Barbie-alias-Altmann was living in La Paz, Bolivia at the time] ... on such purely criminal charges as currency speculation and smuggling, Interpol intervened to thwart his extradition and in support of the refusal of the Bolivian government to extradite Barbie.

"In a similar manner," he continued, "the efforts of federal judge Dr. Jorge Luque of Buenos Aires, Argentina, to obtain the extradition of Dr. Mengele from Paraguay were staved off by the Interpol organizations in Argentina and Paraguay."

Interpol Pursues Political Refugees

Although Interpol has refused to help track down Nazis, it has engaged in the pursuit of political refugees.

In 1950, Czech officials used the Interpol network to hunt down a group of 10 Czech refugees who had fled to West Germany for political reasons. It was this act which caused the United States to withdraw from Interpol in 1950.

Interpol stated publicly that the withdrawal was for "special reasons," but declined to provide details.

However, a November 22, 1961, memo from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to then U.S. Attorney General

AP/WIDE WORLD PHOTOS

Author Ladislas Farago, who spent time in South America pursuing Martin Bormann, found that Interpol officials there were actually protecting Nazi war criminals.

Robert Kennedy revealed that the withdrawal had come "as a direct result of the circulation by Interpol of wanted notices for political refugees from Czechoslovakia."

Interpol Used for Political Or Racial Ends

Other examples of Interpol's involvement in political and racial matters include:

• In 1962, Der Spiegel published an article by its editor, C. Ahlers, criticizing the West German armed services. West German authorities were outraged, and quickly raided the magazine's offices, arresting several of the editors on charges of treason.

Ahlers, who was vacationing in Spain, was arrested by Spanish authorities. Interpol denied having been the conduit for the arrest request, but Der Spiegel subsequently obtained and published a copy of the West German telex to Interpol.

• In 1975, a group of people demonstrated in front of the offices of Kurt Lischka, the former Paris Gestapo chief who lived, a free man, in France at the time. Following a request from Interpol, French police entered the homes of the demonstrators to investigate them and to take their fingerprints.

• In April 1989, Colonel Carlos Camberos, head of the Bolivian office of Interpol, announced that 222 religious groups in Bolivia would have to register with the Bolivian office of Interpol and that investigations would be done into their backgrounds.

Interpol Chief in Chile Heads Oppressive Measures

Under Fernando Paredes Pizarro, the Chilean Secret Police have become infamous for their human rights abuses, including the jailing of civil rights advocates, raids on Roman Catholic churches, and the torture of virtually anyone standing up against the oppressive regime.

Pizarro, who heads the Interpol office in Chile, has also been on the Executive Committee of Interpol since 1987.

Sergio Buschmann was a political activist who was imprisoned in Chile for opposing the Pinochet regime. He escaped in 1987 and continued his anti-Pinochet crusade from abroad. The Interpol office in Chile initiated a "red alert," the group's highest priority wanted notice, on Buschmann.

While traveling from Sweden on a United Nations passport, Buschmann was detained by Australian police for nearly eight hours after arriving in Melbourne, Australia, on May 22, 1989.

Interpol officials pressed to have Buschmann returned to Chile, but the activist's supporters in Australia and elsewhere pointed out that his return to Chile would have been tantamount to a death sentence. The last time he had been jailed in Chile, Buschmann said, he had been tortured and beaten until his ears bled.

Buschmann was later detained a second time, this time in Alaska. This occurred as he returned to Sweden, again as a result of the Interpol red alert.

The case of Sergio Buschmann provides yet another example of direct Interpol involvement in political matters.

Clear Violations of Its Constitution

In the above incidents, Interpol acted in violation of Article 3 of its own constitution, which clearly forbids its involvement in political, religious, military or racial affairs.

William Walsh, a Washington,

Scientology-1173

UPI/BETTMANN NEWSPHOTOS

Although Interpol has refused to help track down Nazi war criminals, it has engaged in the pursuit of political refugees in violation of its constitution.

D.C., attorney concerned about Interpol and its violations of privacy and human rights, made public a letter he wrote in February 1989 to Interpol Secretary General Raymond Kendall.

Walsh's letter said, in part, "[Interpol's] rules and regulations must be adhered to whenever an NCB initiates an inquiry or launches an investigation.... Interpol headquarters cannot simply hide its head in the sand when NCBs are infringing rights and the Interpol constitution is being violated. Otherwise, Interpol's constitution and guiding principles are not worth the paper they are printed on."

This letter was sent in response to a previous letter that Kendall had sent with a memorandum "clarifying" Interpol and its relations with NCBs in regard to Article 3 violations. Kendall's memorandum of January 1989 states:

"Recently, the ICPO-Interpol has been accused of intervening in cases of a religious nature, contrary to Article 3 of the organization's constitution....

"The 'National Central Bureau' (NCB) in each Interpol member country is not part of the legal entity known as 'ICPO-Interpol.' An NCB is a body designated by the appropriate authorities in each member country as its correspondent with the ICPO-Interpol and the other NCBs."

The memorandum from the Interpol secretary general goes on to deny all responsibility for the actions of the group's NCBs: "[O]nly the member country concerned is responsible for the actions of the NCB, not the organization."

■ Control Over Personnel

While not taking responsibility for the actions of its NCBs, Interpol has shown it wants full control over all government personnel assigned to its headquarters.

This is described in a three-page U.S. government memorandum, a copy of which was obtained by the editors of this handbook.

"Interpol headquarters cannot simply hide its head in the sand when NCBs are infringing rights and the Interpol constitution is being violated."

The memo, dated June 6, 1972, describes a meeting between representatives of Interpol — including then President Paul Dickopf, then Secretary General Jean Nepote, and Ken Giannoules of Interpol's U.S. NCB — as well as representatives of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, State Department, Treasury Department, Customs Service, and Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs.

As reported in the memo, the Interpol representatives told those in attendance that "The [Interpol] Secretariat consists of international police officers who have given up their allegiance to their individual countries for the term assigned to Interpol." ▲

CHAPTER FIVE

Interpol and Individual Privacy

"The peculiar thing is that Interpol has immunity as an Inter-Governmental Organization, while they are not such an organization.

"This puts them above the rules of privacy, especially those in relation to police. This is dangerous as it lays open the possibility of misuse of their system."

— Professor Douwe Korff, expert on international law, Maastricht, Holland

On July 1975, the United Nation's Economic and Social Council officially approved Interpol as an Inter-Governmental Organization (IGO).

With this special IGO status, Interpol was able to establish relationships with governments around the world. This facilitated obtaining sensitive information on private individuals from government files.

Then U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, whose role as a former Nazi officer became the subject of international controversy in recent years, was instrumental in helping Interpol obtain its IGO status.

As mentioned in Chapter 2, in June 1983 then U.S. President Ronald Reagan issued an executive order which provided Interpol headquarters, its officers and employees complete immunity from any lawsuits in the United States.

This grant of immunity was the direct result of an intensive lobbying effort by Interpol aimed at shielding itself from liability in U.S. courts for violations of the rights or privacy of American citizens.

In 1984, Interpol headquarters was granted complete immunity by the French government through the Interpol Headquarters Agreement, detailed in Chapter 2.

This "seat agreement" protected Interpol from having to disclose the contents of its files, and also sheltered the organization and its officers from legal accountability for their actions.

This immunity was again the result of a forceful effort by Interpol, including a threat to move the organization's headquarters out of France if such blanket immunity was not forthcoming.

According to an October 13, 1981, article in the German newspaper, Frankfurter Rundschau, Interpol had threatened to move to a nation that did not have strict data protection laws, i.e., somewhere outside Western Europe, if it were not excluded from such laws by being given immunity.

As a result of these agreements, Interpol has managed to put itself above the law, so that an injured party has virtually no recourse.

The National Commission on Law Enforcement and Social Justice (NCLE) has documented numerous cases of individuals claiming to have been jailed, harassed and even physically abused by foreign police officials because of false reports circulated by Interpol.

U.S. Interpol Chief Censured

One of these cases involved Dr. M.S., an Afghan economist with the International Monetary Fund who, in 1973, was working in Washington, D.C., and living in Maryland.

M.S., who asked that his name not be used for fear of losing his job, was divorced, and a Maryland court had given him custody of his two young children.

Late in 1973, despite the court order, his former wife took the children to Florida.

Two years later, after a long period of fruitless negotiations to recover his children, M.S. took matters into his own hands. In May 1975, he traveled to Florida and took the children back to Maryland.

M.S. then decided to fly with the children to Afghanistan. The three of them caught a flight to their homeland.

Meanwhile, M.S.' ex-wife had called Interpol's U.S. NCB. Based on unverified and untrue information provided by her, then U.S. Interpol chief Louis Sims sent out requests for M.S.' arrest and extradition on kidnapping charges.

As a result of these requests, M.S. was arrested when the plane made a stop in Wiesbaden, West Germany.

He was held against his will in solitary confinement for nearly four days before the U.S. State Department could intervene and get him released. Meanwhile, his children were taken away from him and handed over to his ex-wife. M.S. was branded a kidnapper in Interpol files.

In addition to forwarding unverified and untrue information, Interpol chief Sims had bypassed the correct diplomatic channels in requesting M.S.' arrest. Circumvention of these channels renders any arrest request invalid.

This was laid out clearly in a telex about the case that the State Department later sent to its embassy in Bonn: "AS EMB[ASSY] AWARE A REQUEST FOR PROVISIONAL ARREST NOT SENT VIA DIPLOMATIC CHANNEL IS NOT VALID UNDER TREATY."

The State Department's assistant legal adviser, K.E. Malmborg, subsequently wrote to the U.S. Interpol chief, censuring him for Interpol's actions. "From time to time in the past," he said, "we have had difficulty with people being arrested abroad for extradition on instructions from Interpol.

"Recently such a request resulted in the arrest of an Afghanistani in Germany ... and the offense of which he was accused isn't even extraditable."

False Information And Harassment

In another example documented by NCLE, an American businessman named Pierre Dupuy went to a Central American port in early 1976 in order to purchase a ship and bring it back to the United States. Although he and his crew had broken no laws, Interpol agents interrogated members of the crew.

The National Commission on Law Enforcement and Social Justice has documented numerous cases of individuals claiming to have been jailed, harassed and even physically abused by foreign police officials because of false reports circulated by Interpol.

The agents falsely accused crew members of passport violations and had one crew member arrested for no apparent reason. This and other forms of harassment from the Interpol agents caused the ship's sailing to be delayed.

The businessman was eventually allowed to take his ship to San Diego, but the delays and problems caused by Interpol's harassment cost him a great deal of time and money.

According to his written statement, "I have committed no crime yet was hounded ... by Interpol agents and agents of a foreign country, my crew held in jail for no apparent law violations."

Illegal Actions By Interpol Officials

In another instance, FREEDOM Magazine obtained an affidavit from a former U.S. Interpol agent working abroad, declaring that in 1963 Interpol agents planted drugs on individuals and in their homes in order to make arrests and to set people up for imprisonment.

The agent, whose name was withheld at his request, included numerous details in his six-page affidavit, signed in September 1976, of illegal activities and violations of individual rights by Interpol agents and officials with whom he had worked. Here are short excerpts:

- "[Name deleted] then gave me 500 Lire and told me to go downtown and buy some ... jugs ... used for the illegal manufacturing of heroin ... so we could leave them around the house and make it look as though we had busted a heroin manufacturing facility. We had not caught a manufacturing facility."

- "[Name deleted] knew that I knew a person named El Haras. [Name deleted] told me that he wanted to bust El Haras very bad. [Name deleted] wanted to set El Haras up.... I said I would not set him up. [Name deleted] then asked me if I would invite El Haras to my apartment so that he [Name deleted] could talk with him. I told him I would do that.

"That same day, [Name deleted] told me that he had acquired 330 grams of heroin. When El Haras came over to see me, before he got in the door, 10 to 15 police jumped on him. They then said they found 330 grams of heroin on him. He did not have it.... It was a set-up."

Murder and Cover-Up

In another case, involving murder and dissemination of false information, a British professor, John Cart-land, was killed in France in March 1973. His 28-year-old son, Jeremy, who had been traveling with his father, was injured by the attackers.

Young Cartland was interrogated by French police for six hours at the hospital and for nine hours more at a police station. Blinded by bright lights, he was hit on his wounds, struck in the stomach, and pressured to "confess" to killing his father.

The British Consulate intervened, and Cartland was freed.

Jeremy then launched his own investigation into the attack on his father and himself. He charged that the French Police, acting on Interpol's false information, had attempted to frame him.

He returned to France for hearings as he tried to get to the bottom of his father's murder.

Although the search for the murderers was fruitless, on one of young Cartland's trips, a magistrate told one of his lawyers that he had documentation from Interpol that Cartland was a liar.

As Cartland described it, "The afternoon session had started and Delmas [the magistrate] reached dramatically into his desk drawer and read out the message from Interpol in which [a] Professor Cameron was said to have described me as 'a liar who could not be trusted.' He [the magistrate] even phoned the Interpol man in our presence to confirm the authenticity of the report."

Cartland's lawyers, however, reached Professor Cameron, who indignantly denied writing any such report.

It was eventually revealed that Jeremy's father had worked with the French Resistance as part of British intelligence during World War II. He had also been the first intelligence man to enter Gestapo headquarters in Brussels, where he located a list of French and Belgian Nazi collaborators.

According to a special report published by FREEDOM in 1975[1], "Officials admitted that Cartland's wartime activities may be connected to his mysterious death...."

Sensitive Data on Private Citizens Released

The consequences of Interpol's actions are such that the privacy rights of many people can be violated through careless dissemination of information. For example, in August 1988, Interpol's U.S. NCB mistakenly sent several computer tapes compiled by U.S. law enforcement agencies to a private computer company in Ottawa called Advanced Information Technologies (AIT) Corporation.

The consequences of Interpol's actions are such that the privacy rights of many people can be violated through careless dissemination of information.

Human rights advocates have pointed out how easily sensitive data on private citizens can fall into the wrong hands.

The tapes reportedly contained sensitive information, on individuals, that had come from the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Spokesmen for Interpol and AIT downplayed the incident. However, human rights advocates pointed out that the affair demonstrated how easily sensitive data on private citizens can fall into the wrong hands.

Today, through its computer linkups with the U.S. NCB, Interpol has access to information contained in the files of the Internal Revenue Service, U.S. Customs, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other federal agencies.

In fact, these agencies have representatives working directly at Interpol headquarters in Lyon, France, and passing information back and forth to the Interpol General Secretariat, in direct violation of U.S. privacy laws. It should be noted again that Interpol is a private organization, not a governmental body.

In addition, members of other NCBs and governments around the world are employed at Interpol headquarters.

As described in Chapter 4, Interpol's leaders have claimed that the Interpol General Secretariat "consists of international police officers who have given up their allegiance to their individual countries for the term assigned to Interpol."

Furthermore, through its State Liaison Program in the United States[2], Interpol now may be provided with information directly from the law enforcement files of individual U.S. state governments.

This opens the door to wholesale abuse of individual rights and massive invasion of privacy, as information held by the states on individuals can be carelessly disseminated to Interpol's 150 member countries.

The problem is an international one. According to a November 30, 1989, article in the German newspaper, Die Welt, the heart of Interpol's new headquarters in Lyon is a massive computer, one of the world's fastest. Interpol admits the computer has enough storage capacity to hold detailed information on 250,000 people.

[2] As of December 29, 1988, at least 31 states had established Interpol liaison offices.

Scientology-1177

Die Welt reported that the Interpol computer can receive and process 1,000,000 inquiries a year, redistributing the information at once after processing to any number of Interpol offices around the world — 3,000 messages a day containing intimate details of private citizens.

Individual Rights Violated

The accumulation of hundreds of thousands of dossiers on private citizens without their knowledge or consent lends itself to abuses.

The case of Susanne B. from Munich, Germany, provides an example. As reported by the Munich newspaper, Abendzeitung, on January 3, 1989, Susanne, whose last name has been deleted from all press accounts, suffered no less than three false arrests.

In each instance, her identity was confused with that of an international terrorist, Susanne Albrecht. On each occasion, Susanne B., who bears no resemblance to the terrorist, has been apprehended by police with drawn and loaded weapons. Each time, she was on holiday in Italy.

According to Abendzeitung, in 1981, three carabinieri armed with machine guns burst into Susanne's Vicenza hotel room in the middle of the night. She was taken to a police station and had to undergo several hours of interrogation, as well as numerous body searches.

It was found that the problem had originated in the German police computers of the Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden, the seat of the Interpol National Central Bureau in Germany, which maintains communications with Interpol headquarters in the hunting down of terrorists.

Susanne had gotten into the police computers based on some anonymous hint that she might be Susanne Albrecht.

When she filed a complaint with the Federal Criminal Office via her lawyer, she received the calming reply, "All concerned search/investigatory measures have been cancelled."

Her lawyer was informed, "The Italian officials were also requested via telex to cancel the name of your client in all their data systems." He was also told, "All personal data regarding your client have been cancelled from our domestic data banks/data collections."

"Nobody can tell how many people are in jail in any of the 150 member countries of Interpol, having committed no crime, just because local police received an anonymous or unverified report on them.

"Interpol headquarters has continued its refusal to submit itself to an independent control of its data flow. There is only one remaining alternative: that the various member countries cancel their memberships."

Susanne had no reason to feel calmed, however, upon her next visit to Italy. That came in June 1982, when she was surrounded by a swarm of police in civilian attire in an open piazza in Vicenza and arrested at gunpoint.

In November 1988, while staying in a hotel in Grosseto, six police, disguising themselves as a heating unit repair crew, apprehended Susanne in her hotel room. The "repair crew" had a machine gun and bullet-proof jackets.

Understandably very upset by this string of false arrests, Susanne pointed out how easily a bullet might have been fired by accident during any of the three incidents.

Abendzeitung reported that Italian police officials even told Susanne B., after the third incident, that this could happen again, at any time.

François Bonnet, editorial consultant to the Church of Scientology's Ethique & Liberté in Paris, stated, "The example of Susanne B. shows the dangers of uncontrolled personal data flow via Interpol. While the false information from the Federal Criminal Office could be corrected in Germany due to the domestic data protection laws, this did not occur in Italy.

"Nobody can tell how many people are in jail in any of the 150 member countries of Interpol, having committed no crime, just because local police received an anonymous or unverified report on them.

"Interpol headquarters has continued its refusal to submit itself to an independent control of its data flow. There is only one remaining alternative: that the various member countries cancel their memberships."

Protection of Individuals

Western European nations have taken the lead in providing protection of the privacy rights of individuals.

One major step to help private citizens was taken by the Council of Europe in January 1981, when it passed the Convention for the Protection of Individuals with Regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data.

This convention states in Article 6, "Personal data revealing racial origin, political opinions or religious or other beliefs, as well as personal data concerning health or sexual life, may not be processed automatically unless domestic law provides appropriate safeguards. The same shall apply to personal data relating to criminal conviction."

Scientology-1178

Article 7 states, "Appropriate security measures shall be taken for the protection of personal data stored in automated data files against accidental or unauthorized destruction or accidental loss as well as against unauthorized access, alteration or dissemination."

Article 8 states, "Any person shall be enabled:

"a. to establish the existence of an automated personal data file, its main purposes, as well as the identity and habitual residence or principal place of business of the controller of the file.

"b. to obtain at reasonable intervals and without excessive delay or expense confirmation of whether personal data relating to him are stored in the automated data files as well as communication to him of such data in an intelligible form.

"c. to obtain, as the case may be, rectification or erasure of such data if these have been processed contrary to the provisions of domestic law, giving effect to the basic principles set out in Articles 5 and 6 of this convention.

"d. to have a remedy if a request for confirmation or, as the case may be, communication, rectification or erasure as referred to in paragraphs b and c of this article is not complied with."

Interpol, however, is not covered under this convention. Since Interpol is a private group, individuals are not protected from intrusions by Interpol and the convention's safeguards do not prevent Interpol from compiling and disseminating information.

In August 1982 in West Germany, Dr. Reinhard Riegel, a government expert on data protection laws and individual rights, criticized the position of Interpol in holding itself above the laws on data protection.

Writing in the law journal Deutsches Verwaltungsblatt, Dr. Riegel stated:

"The dubious legal position of Interpol must be considered very questionable from the viewpoint of domestic law in regard to cooperation on the exchange of information between the Federal Criminal Office and Interpol on the one hand, and in regard to the function of the [Interpol] General Secretariat in Paris as a central agency on the other.

ORTWIN SCHEIDER

Susanne B. (above) of Munich, Germany, was arrested on three different occasions by police with drawn guns because of false information circulated from the computers of the Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden, the seat of the Interpol National Central Bureau in Germany.

"This results not only from the fact that Interpol, according to the correct view [since it is a private group], cannot be considered as an organization subject to international law. Moreover and decisive for this position is the uncontested and indisputable fact that the exchange of information activities by the Interpol headquarters has not been sufficiently authorized by law in any respect. Interpol constantly undertakes measures that interfere with the rights of individuals (especially the extensive storage and transmission of personal data) and which require legal authorization under domestic law.

"The problems indicated [above] are further compounded by the lack of any independent control of the Interpol headquarters and thus there is a lack of any effective legal protection. The citizen who has several possibilities of control, in and out of court, over police activities is now practically without any protections as soon as data on his person reaches the [Interpol] General Secretariat in Paris.

"Further, there is no guarantee at this point to prevent or examine when domestic protective legal regulations (for example, the prohibition to use illegally obtained information ...) get subverted after a foreign NCB has obtained data from the Federal Criminal Office."

■ Report Shows Interpol Does Not Verify Information

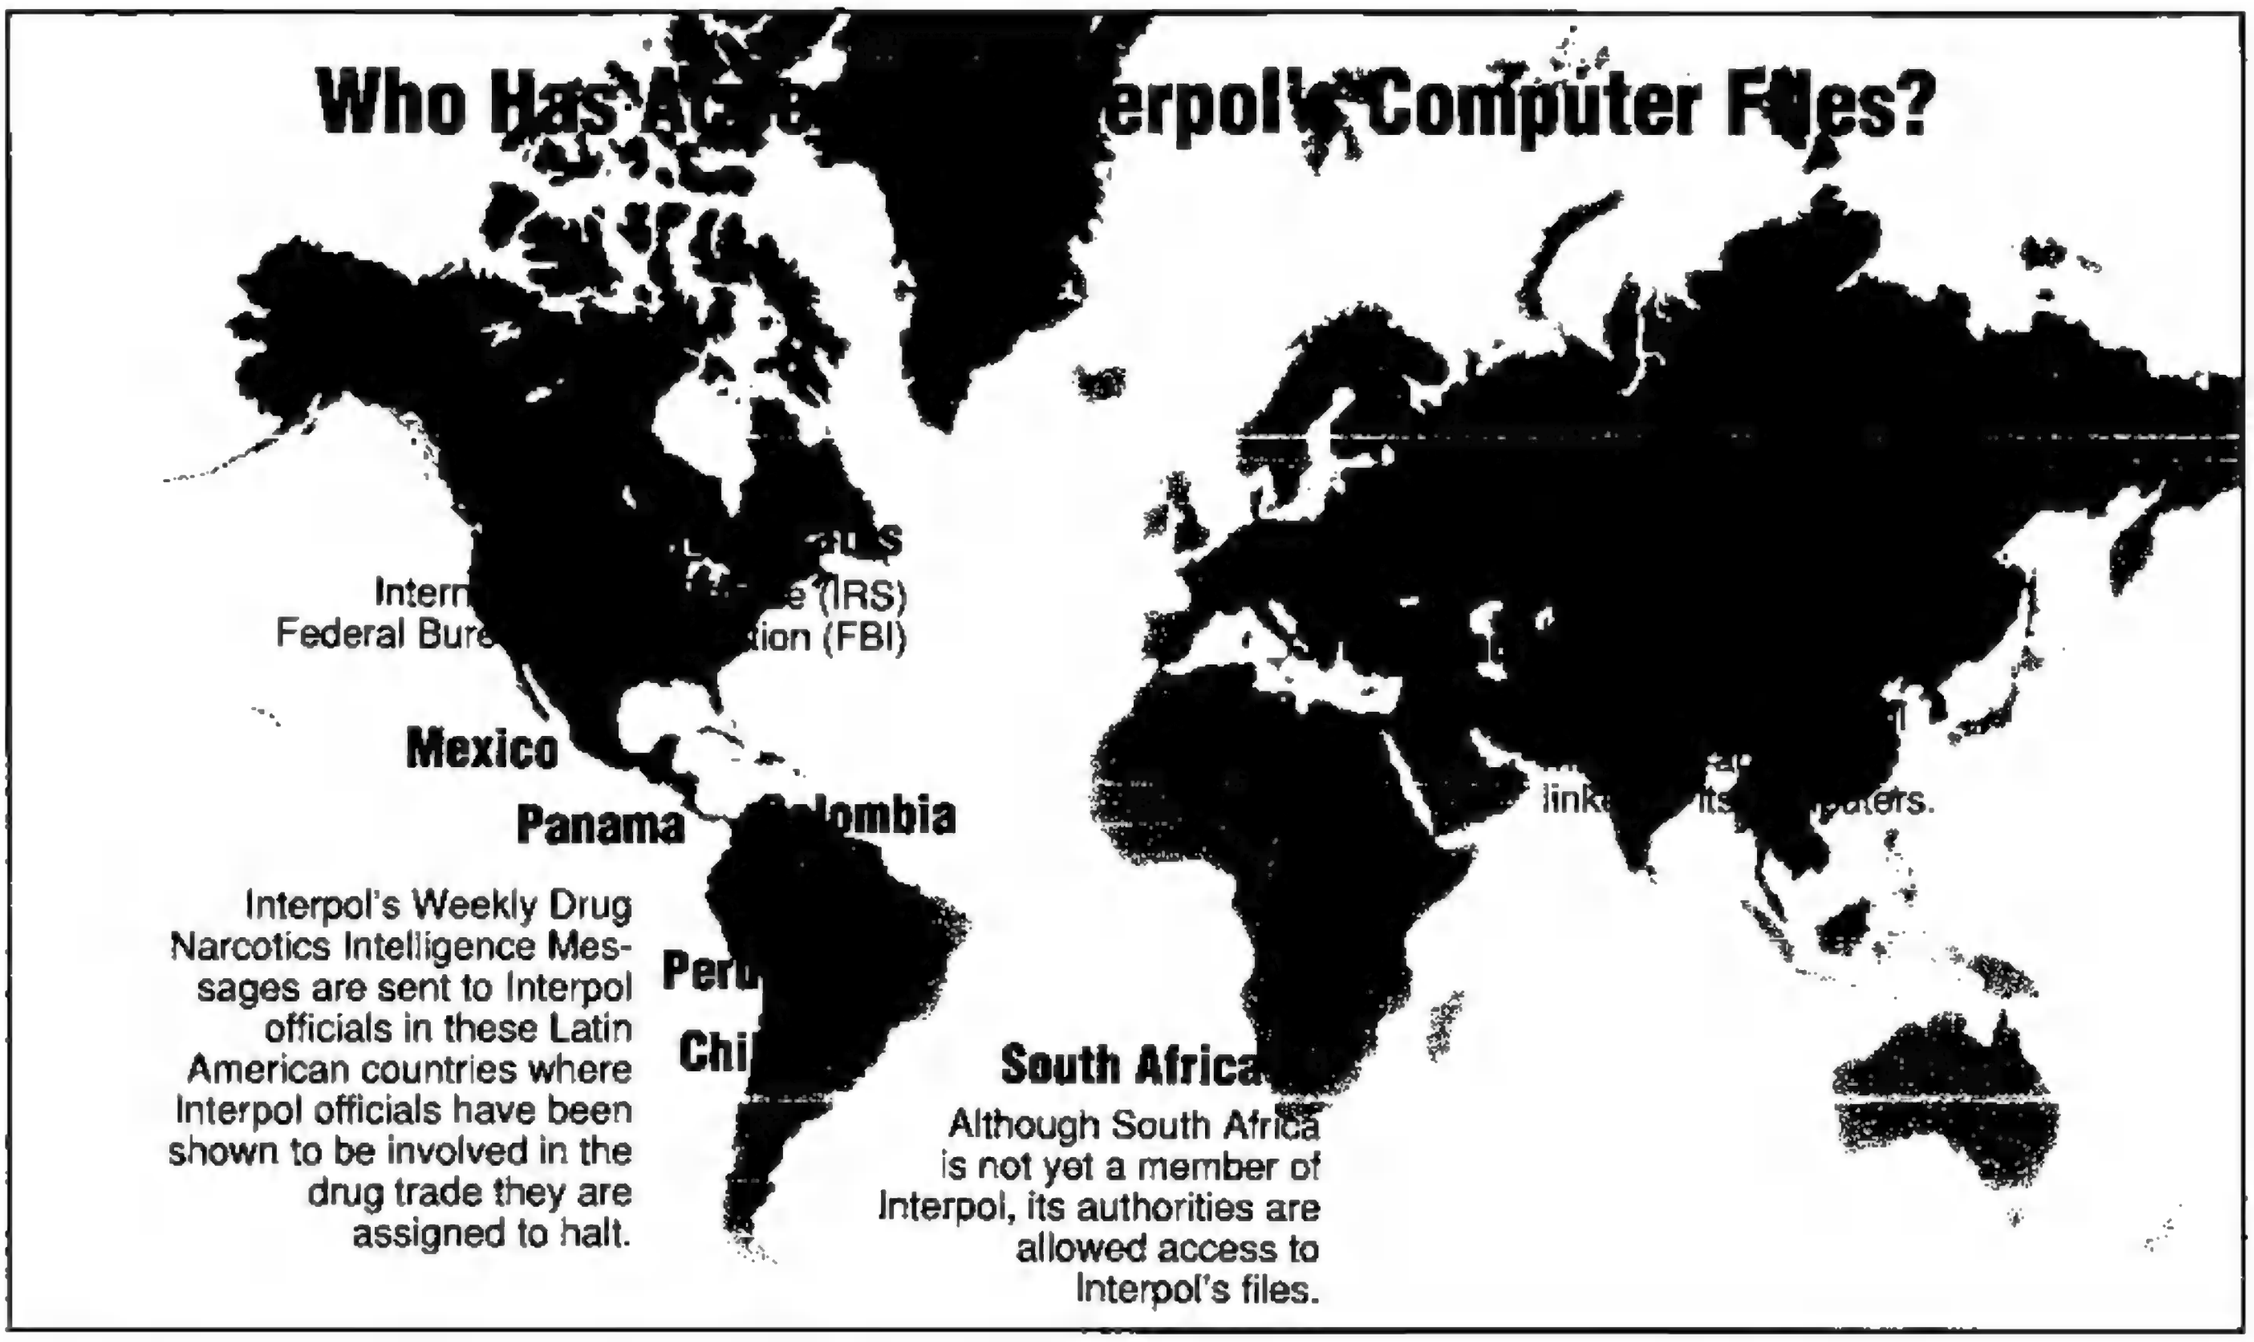
In 1987, the U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) issued a report on Interpol, which stated in part:

"The U.S. NCB generally does not attempt to verify the data it receives from other law enforcement agencies or other automated systems, but relies on the collection agency to ensure accuracy."

In other words, Interpol does not verify the accuracy of the data that it receives, and, as that data can be sent to law enforcement agencies in any of Interpol's member countries, police action can be initiated based solely on unverified or false allegations from police officials in another nation.

The likelihood of police action ensuing would depend solely on the judgment of the police official receiving the information. There are no other checks or balances.

Scientology-1179



The 1987 GAO report highlighted the fact that a U.S. citizen would have no recourse in the event that false Interpol information existed or was acted upon. The report noted that the U.S. NCB had exempted itself from most provisions of the Privacy Act as follows:

"... U.S. NCB need not provide an individual with access to his/her own records, or the opportunity to amend or correct his/her records;

"... An individual has no civil remedy for violation by the agency of any of the act's provisions;

"... U.S. NCB need not inform those who supply information of the purposes for which the information can be used."

In addition, an earlier GAO report on U.S. involvement in Interpol, released in 1976, noted that in more than half of the sample cases reviewed, the U.S. NCB had lacked the full documentation it needed to disseminate information validly, but had gone ahead and disseminated it anyway.

Foreign Police Rarely Verify Data

The situation observed by the GAO in the United States holds true in every Interpol member country in the world. Few if any attempts are made to verify data received through Interpol.

The country sending the information has no knowledge of the use to which the information is put.

No civil remedies exist for individuals abused by the dissemination or other use of false Interpol information, even though in some Interpol member countries one would be lucky to escape alive once imprisoned.

As Interpol member countries such as Libya, Iran, Iraq, Syria, Chile and Cuba have access to the massive Interpol data bank, the problem is a significant one. These countries are known to be involved in terrorist actions or anti-social activity, but yet are in receipt of information from Interpol headquarters, including the Weekly Drug Intelligence Message.

This point was clearly shown in a statement by Norman Jackson, in a Daily Telegraph article of December 7, 1989. Jackson, the senior technical director for the International Air Transport Association, located in Geneva, stated that a new intelligence agency was urgently needed to tackle the rise of technology-backed terrorists.

He said that part of the problem regarding Interpol's exchange of information in the area of terrorism is that states suspected of promoting terrorism are on Interpol committees, thus sensitive information can easily be used for anti-social or terrorist actions against the rest of the world.

In a Reuters wire of December 14, 1989, it was noted that the signing of the Schengen treaty[3] between Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg was opposed

[3] The Schengen treaty, proposed between Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, if adopted, would do away with border controls between those nations.

Scientology-1180

by the Belgian representative, who stated he would only sign the treaty if all partners agreed that Interpol would not be the central body charged with police cooperation in the five countries.

The trend is away from cooperation with Interpol, with countries setting up their own independent means of transmitting information on criminals via safer, more effective lines.

Consequences of the Interpol Headquarters Agreement

André Bossard, former secretary general of Interpol, wrote in the April 1985 edition of Interpol's International Criminal Police Review that a 1972 agreement with the French government had "made no provisions for the inviolability of the headquarters, for immunity from legal process, or for protection of the organization's archives...."

With the Interpol Headquarters Agreement in effect since 1984, the group now enjoys nearly complete immunity from responsibility or oversight. This immunity was lauded by Bossard in the same article: "I consider the privileges and immunities provided for in the headquarters agreement to be of vital importance."

The provisions of the headquarters agreement include:

- Article 7, which states, "The archives of the organization and, in general, all documents belonging to or held by it in whatever form, shall be inviolable wherever they are located;" and

- Article 18, which gives immunity not only to Interpol as an organization, but also to its individual staff members, whether they are currently employed by Interpol or have left the organization.

The key which first opened doors around the world for Interpol, enabling it to gain immunity and thereby operate with impunity, is its Inter-Governmental Organization status from the United Nations.

In November 1989, Professor Douwe Korff, an international legal expert in Holland and adviser to Amnesty International, told the publishers of this booklet, "The peculiar thing is that Interpol has immunity as an Inter-Governmental Organization, while they are not such an organization.

"This puts them above the rules of privacy, especially those in relation to police. This is dangerous as it lays open the possibility of misuse of their system." ▲

Interpol Under Investigation

"... Interpol [was] organized as a private organization by police officers, never submitted its constitution for ratification by any government, [and] has located its headquarters in France where it has been granted immunity from the legal process by the Government of the French Republic, thereby placing the organization above the laws of any land, not being legally accountable for its acts;

"... [I]ndividuals and organizations have been unable to rectify the files on them that Interpol, while having conclusively proven they were false, has sent uncontrolled across borders, secretly showing them to judges, leading in several cases to wrong imprisonment of the civilians involved; [and]

"... Interpol insists that its highest priority is stopping the flow of international drug trafficking, while in recent years, Interpol officials have been reported as being involved in drug trafficking in several South American countries and possibly others."

— Motion for a Resolution, Council of Europe, July 4, 1989

Numerous investigations into Interpol have been carried out over the years.

Interpol was investigated in May 1975 by a U.S. Senate panel chaired by Senator Joseph Montoya. The senator was concerned about Interpol's involvement in intelligence activities.

As described in Chapter 4, Interpol is forbidden by its charter from engaging in matters of a political, military, religious or racial character. Intelligence activities, being inherently political, would constitute violations of the charter.

During questioning by the senator, Interpol's then secretary general, Jean Nepote, asserted, "We have never had any reason whatsoever even to suspect any employee of being an intelligence agent."

Interpol Involved in Intelligence Activities

However, subsequent testimony by the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Social Justice (NCLE) before the U.S. House of Representatives' Subcommittee on Treasury Appropriations revealed that Interpol was involved in intelligence activities.

Documents provided to the subcommittee in 1977 by NCLE made it clear that Interpol performs intelligence work. The papers showed that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was using Interpol as a "front" in at least one country where, according to the documents, "The government ... would be embarrassed, and our foreign relations with that government consequently disrupted, if it were officially acknowledged that it cooperated with the CIA."

Another example of the intertwining of Interpol and intelligence was publicly exposed in July 1988. Zhu Entao of the People's Republic of China, a member of Interpol's Executive Committee, was refused entry to the United States based on evidence that Entao had served as the case officer for Larry Wu-Tai Chin, a former CIA translator who committed suicide in 1986 after being convicted of selling classified information.

GAO Probes Interpol

In 1976, a U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation of U.S. involvement in Interpol was done at the request of Congressman John E. Moss and Senator Montoya.

After a random sampling of cases handled by the U.S. NCB, GAO investigators determined that most cases involved individuals with no prior criminal record.

"Requests made to the U.S. Bureau generally did not involve established international criminals or large crime syndicates," their report stated.

Further, almost half of the sample cases reviewed by the GAO showed that Interpol requested information on individuals based on inadequate documentation of alleged offenses. This in turn led to the creation of files on private citizens at the agencies contacted.

The GAO report also pointed out the dangers of a country's data being passed into the hands of foreign intelligence agencies. "In some countries," the report stated, "the alliance of foreign police systems with the intelligence branches certainly does not preclude the sharing of such information."

During visits to foreign NCBs, GAO investigators were assured that information provided by the United States to recipient countries was restricted to police channels. In their report, however, they concluded, "There is no practical way to insure this is the only use made of the information."

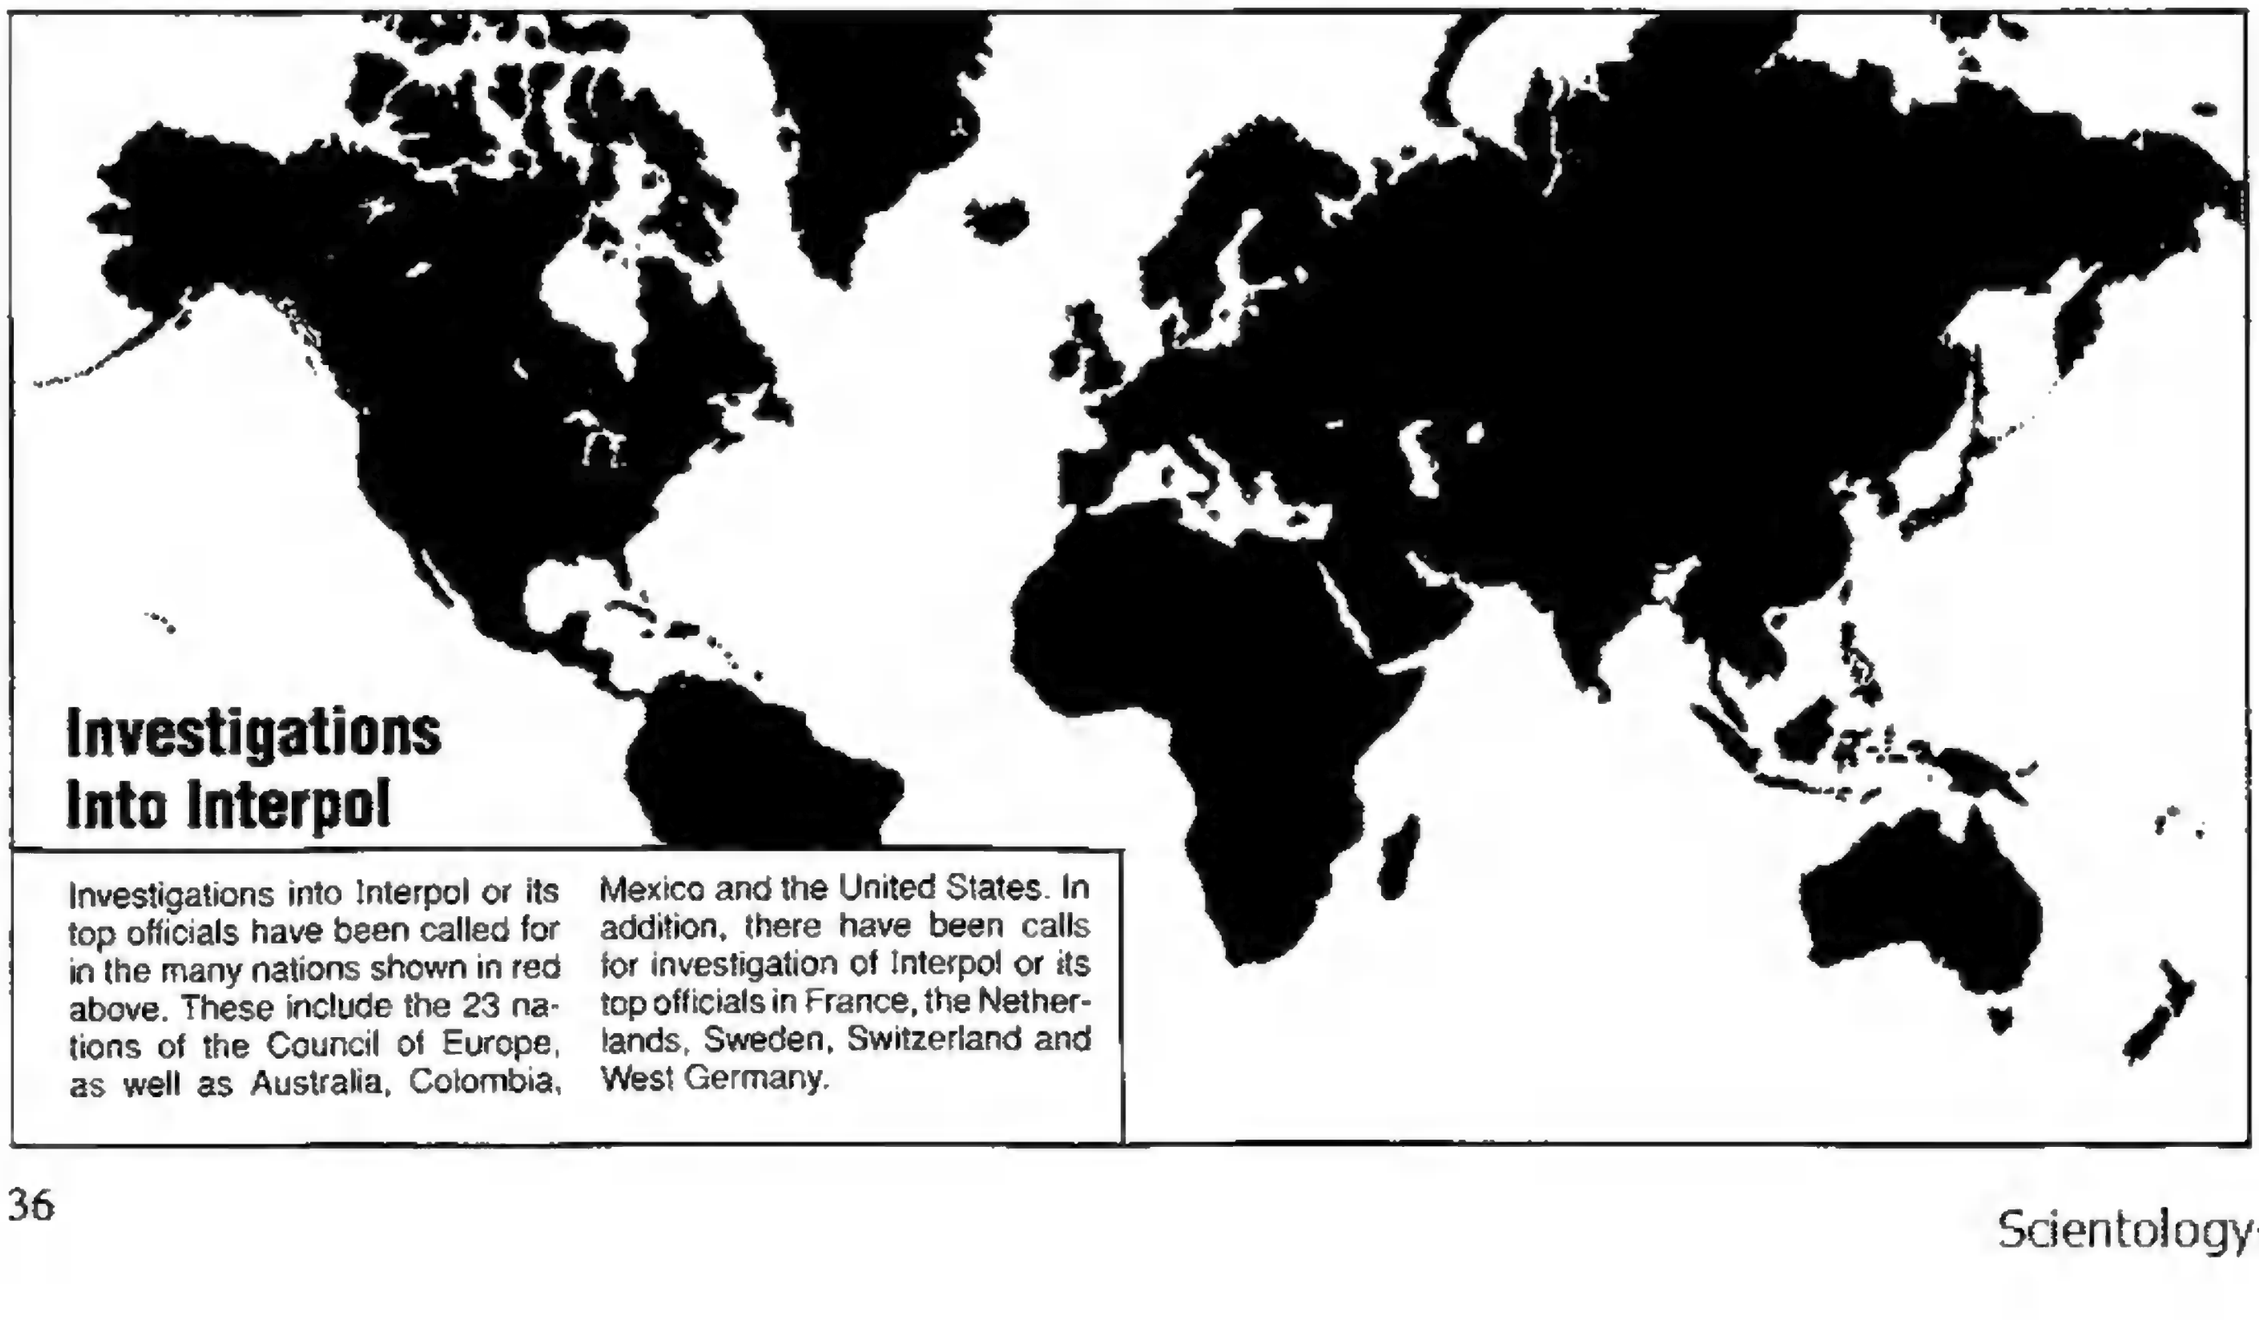
The GAO investigated Interpol again in 1987, and found that the "U.S. NCB generally does not attempt to verify the data it receives from other law enforcement agencies or other automated systems, but relies on the collection agency to ensure accuracy."

Interpol Involvement in Drug Trafficking and Other Crimes

Calls for investigations into Interpol have increased, as evidence of top Interpol officials' involvement in drug trafficking and other illegalities has continued to surface.

In 1989 alone, investigations of this private police group or its top officials were demanded in numerous countries, and by an international body, the Council of Europe[1].

[1] The Council of Europe, a 23-member body of European countries, was established to foster greater unity and cooperation among the nations and peoples of Europe through each of their parliaments and governments.



Investigations Into Interpol

Investigations into Interpol or its top officials have been called for in the many nations shown in red above. These include the 23 nations of the Council of Europe, as well as Australia, Colombia, Mexico and the United States. In addition, there have been calls for investigation of Interpol or its top officials in France, the Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland and West Germany.

Scientology-1183

■ Council of Europe Members Ask for Investigation

On July 4, 1989, 13 members of the Council of Europe issued a motion calling for an extensive investigation of Interpol.

The motion stated, in part:

Interpol "operates internationally with no governmental oversight from any of its member organizations";

• "Interpol provides dossiers, on request, via computer interlink, to police organizations in member countries around the world, amongst which are Iran and Libya who have [been] shown to be involved in international terrorism;

• "... Interpol [was] organized as a private organization by police officers, never submitted its constitution for ratification by any government, [and] has located its headquarters in France where it has been granted immunity from the legal process by the Government of the French Republic, thereby placing the organization above the laws of any land, not being legally accountable for its acts;

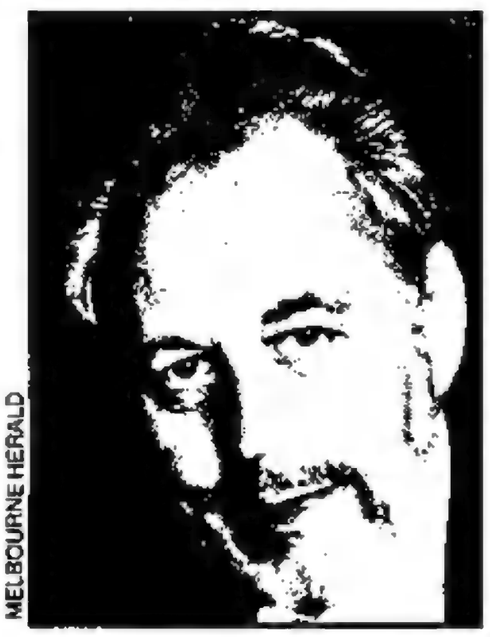
• "... [I]ndividuals and organizations have been unable to rectify the files on them that Interpol, while having conclusively proven they were false, has sent uncontrolled across borders, secretly showing them to judges, leading in several cases to wrong imprisonment of the civilians involved; [and]

• "... Interpol insists that its highest priority is stopping the flow of international drug trafficking, while in recent years, Interpol officials have been reported as being involved in drug trafficking in several South American countries and possibly others."

The motion calls for the following:

"a. The status of Interpol with the Council of Europe should be reviewed;

"b. An inventory of transgressions committedby Interpol shouldbe drawn up;



MELBOURNE HERALD

AP/WIDE WORLD PHOTOS

Australian Member of Parliament Lewis Kent, left, has demanded answers to questions concerning Interpol's finances, constitution, accountability, Nazi past, and connections with drug trafficking. In early 1989, Colombia's President Barco Vargas, center, fired his Interpol head and chief of police, José Guillermo Medina Sanchez, following allegations that Medina was on the payroll of the Medellín drug cartel. David Noriega, right, of the Chamber of Representatives of Puerto Rico has attacked the drug trafficking activities of top Interpol officials and called for an investigation into the private police group.

"c. Effective ways to control the International Criminal Police Organization, Interpol, in a democratic fashion should be considered ... so that Interpol hereafter will be accountable for its acts;

"d. Strict measures should be elaborated and recommended to ensure that... a refusal by Interpol to reveal and rectify files on request by an individual or organization is scrutinized by an independent, democratically chosen committee that controls Interpol...."

■ Mexican Attorney General Investigates Former Interpol Chief

Mexican Attorney General Enrique Alvarez del Castillo announced on July 6, 1989, that the former head of Interpol in Mexico, Miguel Aldana Ibarra, was being investigated on charges of corruption and drug trafficking.

The charges stemmed from Aldana's complicity in the murder of a prominent journalist in 1984, and also from his alleged activities in protecting and taking money from drug traffickers.

■ Australian MP Questions Interpol

On October 26, 1989, the Honorable Lewis Kent, Australian Member of Parliament, demanded answers of the country's attorney general regarding Australia's involvement with Interpol.

Among the points of his formal interrogatory were the following:

"Which Australian police unit is charged with the responsibility to cooperate and/or to maintain contact with Interpol?

"How many persons serve in the unit?

"What is the cost of maintaining the unit?

"What is Australia's annual financial contribution to Interpol?

"... how many former war criminals were tracked down after World War II by Interpol, or with significant assistance by Interpol; if so, is he able to provide their names?

Scientology-1184

"Have the Interpol charter and its constitution been submitted for ratification by Australia?

"Will the Australian government support moves to bring Interpol under the control of, and make it accountable to, an international body such as the U.N. or the International Court of Justice?"

Mr. Kent also sought information from the attorney general in regard to the involvement of Interpol officials in drug trafficking and Interpol's violation of Article 3 of its constitution — i.e., breaking its own rules and intervening in matters of a political, military, religious or racial character.

Colombian Interpol Official Implicated in Corruption

On February 20, 1989, Time magazine reported that General José Guillermo Medina Sanchez, Colombia's Interpol chief and head of the country's National Police, had been fired by President Virgilio Barco Vargas after the general came under suspicion of being on the payroll of Medellín drug kingpin Pablo Escobar Gaviria.

In March 1989, Colombia's Supreme Court ordered a formal probe into Medina's role in drug smuggling and into reports that he frustrated attempts to capture two of the Medellín cartel[2] drug lords in Colombia.

Panamanian Interpol Chief

As covered earlier in this handbook, the former Interpol chief of Panama and Noriega's close henchman, Nivaldo Madriñan, was placed in jail by U.S. forces in January 1990 at Fort Clayton in Panama, and murder charges were filed against him.

[redacted]

...evidence of top Interpol officials' involvement in drug trafficking and other illegalities has continued to surface.

Madriñan had access to confidential drug trafficking information from Interpol headquarters, and was in attendance at the November/December 1989 Interpol General Assembly in Lyon, just a few weeks prior to his imprisonment.

[2] The Medellín cartel exports tons of cocaine to the United States and Europe each year and is the world's main supplier of the drug.

Puerto Rican Representative Calls for Investigation

On January 31, 1990, a member of the Chamber of Representatives of Puerto Rico, David Noriega (no relation to the former Panamanian dictator), decried the drug trafficking activities of top Interpol officials and called for an investigation into plans for a regional office of Interpol on the island.

A resolution Rep. Noriega introduced into the Chamber of Representatives noted that "Recent reports reveal that the director of Interpol of Panama was involved in the drug trafficking activities of General Manuel Antonio Noriega in Panama."

A thorough probe was needed, he stated, "considering especially the immunities that Interpol demands ... and the abuses that can be perpetrated under such immunities."

Other Probes Demanded

As of early 1990, there were also calls for investigations of Interpol or top Interpol officials in Sweden, West Germany, France, Switzerland, the Netherlands and the United States. ▲

Scientology-1185

CHAPTER SEVEN

Is Interpol Really Necessary?

"... to many veteran law officers who have dealt with Interpol, it is a slow-moving, archaic bureaucracy which seldom performs useful work."

— Robert Walters in Parade magazine

Interpol's stated aim is "To ensure and promote the widest possible mutual assistance between all criminal police authorities within the limits of the laws existing in the different countries and in the spirit of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights."

Rather than accomplishing this aim, top Interpol officials have been fostering a climate conducive to crime, turning a blind eye to the world's most serious offenses, and exploiting their positions in order to protect or forward criminal activities.

The question arises as to whether Interpol itself, with its many liabilities, is necessary. Are there other systems that could provide the same services as Interpol, but without the risks and violations of civil rights?

Other Police Liaison Functions Exist

What is most significant about Interpol's activities is that member nations already use other means of handling international police liaison functions.

In the United States, for example, where taxpayers pay millions annually to finance the Washington Interpol office, channels exist for sending law enforcement communications overseas via the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Customs Service and other law enforcement agencies.

In Europe, any penal prosecutions and extraditions between two nations are normally covered under bilateral agreements. The various EEC countries have also passed a special convention in this regard.

Since arrests in Interpol member nations are made by national agencies within those countries — not by Interpol — no proper law enforcement functions would be lost if Interpol did not exist.

The U.S. State Department, through U.S. embassy officers, has a system for reporting on the status of Americans arrested abroad. The United States also has a "Legat" (short for legal attaché) system as part of the FBI. FBI Legats are attached to American embassies around the world. Their functions include liaison with foreign police and many of the other activities of an Interpol NCB.

A December 27, 1976, General Accounting Office (GAO) report provided evidence which demonstrates that Interpol's functions are superfluous and that Interpol itself is ineffective.

After a careful study of Interpol, the GAO noted that "foreign police and National Central Bureaus make extensive use of non-Interpol channels in dealing with U.S. matters. Our overseas discussions indicated that foreign police prefer the communication channels of overseas U.S. agencies to satisfy criminal information needs.

"The Drug Enforcement Administration, FBI, Customs, and, to a lesser extent, such agencies as the Secret Service and Immigration and Naturalization Service, have offices in major cities of the world.

"The tendency of foreign police and central bureaus is to try to obtain information through these agencies because they are considered faster, more flexible than Interpol in terms of the types of cases they handle, and more effective at least in connection with providing information relevant to immediate investigatory matters." (Emphasis added.)

Police Cooperation

Local police forces have their own means of liaising with foreign police. For example, there is a Foreign Prosecution Section in the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) which specifically deals with tracking down and apprehending criminals or suspects in foreign countries.

This section primarily uses the FBI Legats or the LAPD's own direct contacts with foreign police. According to an officer in this section, the LAPD only used Interpol two or three times between 1985 and 1989.

The U.S. Justice Department maintains offices in certain cities which help smaller police departments coordinate with foreign police forces to track down and apprehend wanted criminals.

The Justice Department also maintains a Law Enforcement Coordinating Committee (LECC) in each of the U.S. judicial districts. Each committee consists of representatives from the various local, state and federal law enforcement agencies in a district; it will if necessary help these agencies liaise with foreign law enforcement agencies to apprehend criminals and prepare extradition papers.

Additionally, as the 1976 GAO report noted, the vast majority of foreign requests to the United States for information regarding crimes are made directly to overseas offices of U.S. agencies.

Government Agencies "Simply Do Not Trust Interpol"

A reason why Interpol is not utilized to a greater extent by member nations was outlined to FREEDOM Magazine by a former U.S. Marshals Service official who requested anonymity. The fact is, he said, government agencies "simply do not trust Interpol."

The 1976 GAO report showed that the Washington Interpol office was quite careless in sending information about citizens abroad without first determining if record checks and investigations on individuals were even justified.

Top Interpol officials have been fostering a climate conducive to crime, turning a blind eye to the world's most serious offenses, and exploiting their positions in order to protect or forward criminal activities.

In one instance cited by the GAO, Interpol's U.S. NCB sent sensitive information to a foreign NCB concerning a U.S. citizen even though the State Department had submitted a formal diplomatic note to the country complaining that the individual had been mistreated during interrogation.

"Interpol Is a Mailbox Company"

Another reason Interpol is not used is because, when it comes to the job of apprehending criminals, Interpol is slow and cumbersome. An example of this occurred following the arrest in Montpelier, France, of a criminal wanted by police in the West German city of Munich.

The Munich police had been looking for the man for months and had sent a telex to this effect to Interpol headquarters in Paris in August 1988. French police subsequently arrested the man, but Interpol headquarters didn't consider it necessary to inform the Munich police of that fact.

In December 1988, the German police computer still listed the criminal as being wanted. The Munich police later discovered the arrest from an entirely different source of information.

Commenting on this case, Hermann Ego, district chairman of the German Federation of Criminal Police, stated, "Unfortunately, this is not the only case. Sometimes requests take years and longer. Interpol is a mailbox company."

A journalist for a German newspaper wrote in December 1988, "Interpol in Paris, which is supposed to coordinate the police work of around 100 countries, still works with the style of a stagecoach ... as pensive and slow as 100 years ago. We get the bill in the form of higher rates of criminality."

Interpol "Seldom Performs Useful Work"

The perception of Interpol as a slow and bungling organization is not new. In an article entitled "Does Interpol Threaten Your Privacy?", in the November 9, 1975, issue of Parade, Robert Walters wrote: "In novels of international intrigue, Interpol is an infallible, high-powered, worldwide police department whose agents roam the globe in search of master criminals.

"But to many veteran law officers who have dealt with Interpol, it is a slow-moving, archaic bureaucracy which seldom performs useful work."

Scientology-1187

The September 22, 1974, issue of the London Sunday Times stated that Interpol "is considered an irrelevance by many police forces in the world."

Inefficient, slow-moving, archaic — if those words describe the real Interpol, then what is this group, with its multimillion-dollar budget and its worldwide network of employees, actually doing?

As documented by information in this handbook, top Interpol officials throughout the world have been linked to drug trafficking, complicity in murder, protection of major drug cartels, bribery, political corruption, and money laundering.

Interpol's results in the areas it is supposed to handle are all but nonexistent; the few arrests that do result from its work are mainly of small-time drug users.

Meanwhile, drug cartels and major drug traffickers continue to operate virtually unhindered. ▲

CHAPTER EIGHT

What Should Be Done About Interpol?

"a. The status of Interpol with the Council of Europe should be reviewed;
"b. An inventory of transgressions committed by Interpol should be drawn up;
"c. Effective ways to control the International Criminal Police Organization, Interpol, in a democratic fashion should be considered ... so that Interpol hereafter will be accountable for its acts...."

— Motion for a Resolution, Council of Europe, July 4, 1989

As drug trafficking, crime and terrorism plague virtually all nations of the world, there is an urgent need for a coordinated international effort to bring an end to these problems.

Interpol's record is one of ineffectiveness and complicity with the criminal activities it was established to bring under control. Interpol and its top officials have been part of the problem, not part of the solution.

Interpol chiefs in numerous countries have been charged with complicity in the international narcotics trade.

Other crimes, including hideous tortures and murders, have involved Interpol officials as accessories, if not perpetrators.

This police organization with a Nazi history has refused to help find Nazi war criminals, and has blocked searches for such notorious Nazis as Klaus Barbie and Josef Mengele.

With the signing of the 1984 Interpol Headquarters Agreement, any vestige of outside supervision, control or oversight of Interpol was abolished, leaving this private police group free to circulate unverified, false information around the world from the hundreds of thousands of dossiers it has accumulated on private citizens and public officials.

Interpol has placed itself above the law.

Interpol has demonstrated that it is incapable, or perhaps unwilling, to clean up its own internal corruption.

Replacing Interpol

A number of governments and world leaders have recommended different solutions to the question of what to do about Interpol.

With the taking down of Western Europe's internal borders, many authorities see a need to establish a new European police force in place of Interpol. As claimed by the Belgian official in December 1989, Belgium would not sign the Schengen treaty with Germany, France, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, unless the treaty stated that Interpol would not be the central body charged with police cooperation in these countries.

John Alderson, the former chief constable of the British counties of Devon and Cornwall and an honorary research fellow at Exeter University's Centre for Police and Criminal Justice Studies, described Interpol in his address as an unsatisfactory body not properly accountable to the democratic process.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, in an article appearing in the Paris Herald Tribune on February 10, 1989, called for a "supra-national" police force to be set up. This would operate throughout Europe, handling criminal matters in the manner that the FBI operates in the United States. The article noted Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez supported Mr. Kohl's concept. Both leaders stated that Interpol did not have the capabilities, nor the effectiveness to handle this situation in the Europe of 1992.

Willy Helin, spokesman for the European Communities' Executive Commission, was quoted in the same article as follows: "We have to ensure that things like drugs can be controlled. As we progress along the path toward political integration, we will eventually need a police force that corresponds to that sort of dimension."

Interpol, the article pointed out, was inadequate to meet these needs.

What Has Been Done?

In Chapter 6, it was described how members of the Council of Europe proposed a resolution to thoroughly investigate Interpol in its member countries and from there make their recommendations.

The Council of Europe members stated:

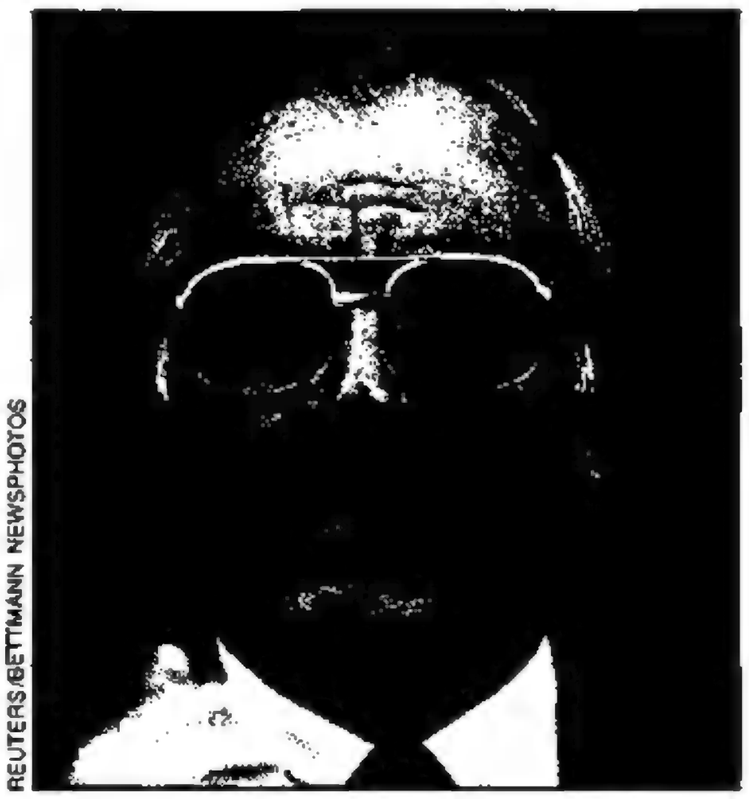
"a. The status of Interpol with the Council of Europe should be reviewed;

"b. An inventory of transgressions committed by Interpol should be drawn up;

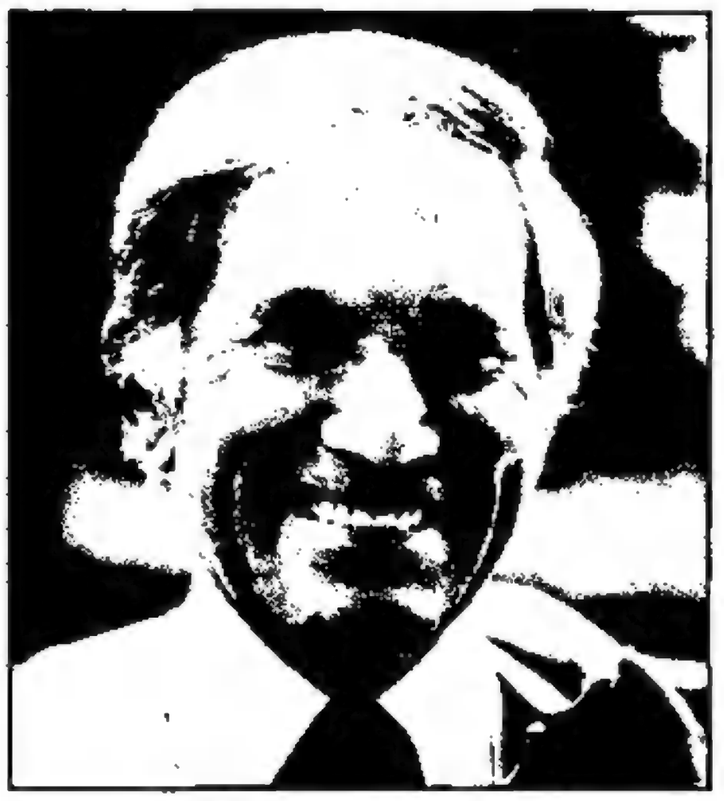
"c. Effective ways to control the International Criminal Police Organization, Interpol, in a democratic fashion should be considered ... so that Interpol hereafter will be accountable for its acts...."

In Australia, Member of Parliament Lewis Kent presented an interrogatory to the attorney general of Australia regarding Interpol, its legal status, dissemination of information, and its involvement with drug trafficking.

United States Congressman Don Edwards requested that the General Accounting Office investigate Interpol in 1987, and has been interested in the privacy violations caused by Interpol's dissemination of information since that time.



REUTERS/BETTMANN NEWSPHOTOS



Left: A more effective European alternative to Interpol has been proposed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. Right: In 1987, U.S. Congressman Don Edwards requested that the U.S. government's General Accounting Office investigate Interpol.

The attorney general for Mexico, Enrique Alvarez del Castillo, has been actively investigating former Interpol chief Miguel Aldana Ibarra and his drug trafficking activities while heading Interpol. As part of this investigation, information is being disclosed regarding Interpol headquarters' dissemination of information to the Mexican NCB while the past two Mexican Interpol chiefs, the recipients of confidential drug data, have been drug traffickers.

The former Interpol chief in Panama, Nivaldo Madriñan, was placed in jail by U.S. armed forces in January 1990, and murder charges were filed against him. Interpol's actions in support of Noriega and Madriñan and their corrupt activities helped to tear that country apart.

In light of such actions, Interpol is under scrutiny throughout the world, which is the first step — awareness that something is wrong and needs to change. Based on these investigations, recommendations will be made and implemented.

A Public Menace

Interpol is a private group that is a public menace, out of control.

It is not a governmental agency, and it is not subject to any government.

It operates in violation of its own charter and many of its top officials have broken the law.

As noted by members of the Council of Europe, thorough investigation of its transgressions is warranted.

Interpol has shown by its actions that it should not have the authority and immunity it currently enjoys.

If you agree that the Inter-Governmental Organization (IGO) status given to Interpol by the United Nations should be revoked, your opinion and voice in this regard should be made known to the United Nations' Economic and Social Council. The address is in the Appendices. Write and let your views be known.

If you care about individual rights, privacy and freedom, support measures to have your nation's membership in Interpol withdrawn, and Interpol's charter cancelled. ▲

Enclosed herewith for Houston is a copy of report by SA [redacted] dated 7/15/69 at Los Angeles, containing background information of this case.

b7C - 1

Kansas City has conducted considerable investigation in this matter with regard to the movements of subject [redacted] and his associate, [redacted] Of particular significance is the fact that the subject has, since the latter part of 1968, subscribed to [redacted]. The facts of this case indicate rather strongly that this box is utilized by [redacted] as a mail drop, and upon institution of investigation in this case the box was placed under periodic observation by the FBI and local authorities in Kansas City. Keeping in mind the possibility that [redacted] may attempt to transmit the loot in this case to himself in care of his mail drop at Kansas City, particular attention was paid to the presence of a package appearing in this P.O. Box. No such package actually appeared, however, on or about 7/31/69 a Post Office form was observed to be in the box indicating either a package was being held or mail was being held too large for the box. A Federal search warrant was obtained for a search of this P.O. Box, and the Post Office Sub Station where it is housed at Kansas City, on 7/31/69. This search warrant was served and it was found that no packages were actually being held. The only items not contained in the box were merely an accumulation of letters and magazines too large to fit in the box. While inspecting the contents of the box and those items being held for [redacted] by the Post Office, cursory observation revealed all items were the bulk advertising type mail and magazines. b6 - 6 b7C - 6

While in the process of executing the search warrant in this instance, a postal employee volunteered that he recalled [redacted] appearing at his window several weeks ago and mailed a package to himself in care of General Delivery, Houston, Texas. He further recalled that [redacted] told him the package contained foreign money and he transmitted it via registered mail, placing a value on the package of $13,700. Following therefore, the registry records were checked and the recollection of the postal employee in this instance was verified as follows: b6 - 6 b7C - 6

On 6/9/69 [redacted] b6 - 6 b7C - 6
City, Mo., mailed a registered package to himself in care of General Delivery, Houston, Texas. He mailed this package at the Plaza Station of the Kansas City, Mo. Post Office, under Registry Receipt #254865, and he valued the package at $13,700.

It is apparent from the above that the package mailed by [redacted] is, in fact, the loot in this case. b6 - 6 b7C - 6

AT LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Sergeant [redacted] LADP, Rampart Division, b6 - 5, 6 b7C - 5, 6 advised on August 22, 1969, that he had this date received a wire from Captain [redacted] Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office, West Palm Beach, Florida, advising that [redacted] had waived extradition and was presently available for release to the LAPD. Sergeant advised he would leave Los Angeles later this date or tomorrow for Florida, and return [redacted] to Los Angeles.

Sergeant [redacted] LAPD, Rampart Division, b6 - 5, 6 b7C - 5, 6 was contacted on September 9, 1969, for information concerning [redacted], and he furnished the following:

[redacted] was held to answer in a local Los Angeles b6 - 6 b7C - 6 court for preliminary hearing on September 4, 1969, to the Grand Theft charge pending against him. [redacted] contends that he did not take any Swiss francs or bank notes from the Church of Scientology safe, but removed only certain documents which would evidence a tax fraud on the part of this organization. His intention in taking this material was to furnish it to Internal Revenue Service.

This Church of Scientology organization began around 1950, in England, headed by ELRAN HUBBARD. They were asked to leave England, and were subsequently likewise asked to leave Spain, and so the organization came to this country.

[redacted] of the Attorney General's Office b6 - 4, 6 b7C - 4, 6 at Los Angeles, has in his possession a tape which has recorded a four to five hour interview with [redacted] concerning his relationship with the Church of Scientology. This organization is world-wide and which numbers about seven million. The organization had contacted [redacted] in Florida just prior to his arrest and offered to buy return transportation to California, but he refused. It appears that [redacted] became disenchanted with his employment for the Church of Scientology in Los Angeles, which was paying him $14.00 a week, and decided to terminate his relationship with the organization.

[redacted] has been released from the Grand Theft charge on bail, and is presently residing at [redacted]. An associate of [redacted] was residing in [redacted], but indicated that he planned to move to San Francisco sometime in mid-September. b6 - 2, 6 b7C - 2, 6

Assistant United States Attorney [redacted] Los Angeles, was contacted on September 10, 1969, and was furnished information concerning [redacted]'s arrest in Florida, and subsequent release to the LAPD. Assistant United States Attorney [redacted] stated he would request dismissal of the Unlawful Flight process pending against [redacted] b6 - 4, 6 b7C - 4, 6

[redacted] United States Commissioner's Office, advised on September 15, 1969, that his office had been advised a complaint against [redacted] charging him with violation Title 18, Section 1073, United States Code, had been dismissed. b6 - 4, 6 b7C - 4, 6

Files at the LAPD were caused to be checked on July 22, 1969, by IC [redacted], and records of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office were caused to be checked on July 14, 1969, by SA [redacted] No records were located for [redacted] b6 - 1, 5, 6 b7C - 1, 5, 6

CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY

The central files of this Bureau reveal there have been numerous inquiries from citizens to the FBI regarding the Church of Scientology (COS) dating from the 1960s. We have also received numerous allegations of criminal violations against COS, including charges of kidnapping, extortion, violations of child labor laws, prostitution, drugs and theft. (U)

COS was founded by Lafayette Ron Hubbard, whose theory of "scientology" was an alleged science which instilled self-confidence, assisted in removing mental problems and was dedicated to the freedom of the "spirit." Hubbard died January 24, 1986.

Church of Scientology

In May, 1976, members of COS impersonated IRS agents and gained access to the U. S. Attorney's Office in Washington, D. C. They were discovered in the act of reproducing Government documents. This incident precipitated a massive investigation by the FBI against various officials of the COS for violations ranging from Theft of Government Property to Aiding and Abetting. (U)

During our investigation, two COS offices (California and Washington, D. C.) were searched in July, 1977, and over 20,000 documents confiscated. (U)

In October, 1979, nine officials of the COS were convicted for directing a conspiracy to steal Government documents about COS. In December, 1980, two more officials were extradited from Europe and convicted in this case. (U)

COS filed several civil actions suits in the late 1970s and 1980s. The Department of Justice (DOJ) and FBI were defendants in at least two of these civil actions. Both actions involved cases seeking equitable relief in the form of injunctions prohibiting the FBI and DOJ from harassing and interfering with the Church's exercise of their first amendment rights. (U)

Our Tampa, Florida, Office conducted an investigation in 1984 into charges that COS had set up an elaborate scheme to utilize drugs and prostitutes to compromise a Federal judge presiding over civil litigation involving the COS. Investigation failed to substantiate the allegations and the U. S. Attorney, Tampa, declined prosecution. (U)

COS was the subject of an Obstruction of Justice investigation by our San Antonio and Boston Field Offices in 1985. COS reportedly hired private investigators in an attempt to uncover what our field offices were doing in their investigation of the Hubbard check case and to determine the identities of our Agents. No prosecution resulted. (U)

Reportedly, COS has an enemy list and they attempt to discredit, embarrass or harass former members of COS, their attorneys and others. (U)

Subject : CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY
INFORMATION CONCERNING

At approximately 10:15PM on 10/19/88, an unidentified male caller, who refused to identify himself other than to say he was high-level executive of the Church of Scientology, telephoned the Los Angeles office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and related the following:

It was his understanding that there was a current investigation being condcuted by the U.S. Attorney's Office, allegedly in Las Vegas, and that he was aware there had been large scale investigation years ago.

This anonymous source, who was calling from [redacted] a large number of documents for destruction which will occur at 8:00AM on 10/20/88PDT, at two locations, one in Las Vegas and the other being in Los Angeles. The Las Vegas address is 846 E. Sahara Boulevard, Las Vegas, and in the blue building on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood, California.

The documents set for destruction concern memoranda that were authored by L. RON HUBBARD subsequent to the Los Angeles raid several years ago. These documents are in reference to financial information about Scientology, including memoranda stating that this material should never be disseminated to any outside source.

In addition, a number of documents deals with how the Church of Scientology acquires, allocates, reports, and distributes their income and how they hide assets.

There were also some legal documents and a record of past litigation which were slated for destruction. In total, the number of documents scheduled to be destroyed were estimated by the source to be about 30,000.

This caller refused to identify himself for fear of retaliation and personal reprisals against his individual safety. Source offered the ifnromation because he feels there is a vast amount of fraud going on and that the scheduled destruction may be in violation of a legal court order.

The anonymous said that after the last raid, numerous people in Church were hurt, some financially, others physically. [redacted] a memorandum, which is slated for this upcoming destruction, which identified an individual who allegedly furnished information to investigating authorities, mandated that this individual, under no circumstances, was to leave the Church, and if necessary, death would be considered to prevent his departure. It was the caller's belief that this person was eventually killed. The caller identified this memorandum as an internal "policy letter."

In a civil suit captioned Church of Scientology of Hawaii v. United States of America, Civil No. 70-3138, U. S. District Court for the District of Hawaii, a Temporary Restraining Order was issued on December 17, 1974, which enjoins the U. S. Government, its officers, agents, servants, employees and attorneys from destroying or otherwise interfering with the "...preservation of any and all records and files in its or their possession or control pertaining to plaintiff [Church of Scientology of Hawaii] and/or any other Church of Scientology in the United States or elsewhere...." By stipulation of the U. S. Government on December 24, 1974, this Order has been extended until January 27, 1975.

This Order precludes you from complying with prior instructions you have received concerning the destruction of old files and records as they may pertain to plaintiff and related organizations. You will subsequently be immediately advised once this restriction is removed. Although we have been advised by Departmental attorneys that this suit involves tax matters only and is actually being handled by the Tax Division of the Department, SAC, Honolulu, is requested to contact the United States Attorney and obtain copies of the pleadings and any other documents filed in this case and forward to FBI Headquarters, Attention: Legal Counsel Division. You should also follow this case and advise Bureau of any pertinent developments that could affect us, since we are currently involved in a civil litigation brought by the Church of Scientology of Washington, D. C., Inc., to compel us to disclose information in our files concerning that organization and related groups under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act.

Re Bureau airtel to SAC, Albany under the above caption, 1/24/75.

Referenced airtel advised you of a Temporary Restraining Order issued by the U. S. District Court for the District of Hawaii which precluded destruction of all government records pertaining to captioned church.

By stipulation between the parties to this litigation it has been agreed that preservation of IRS records only was sought and the Order has therefore been lifted by the District Court. Authorized routine destruction of FBI records is therefore no longer precluded by this particular Order.

The above has no effect on the instructions contained in Bureau teletype to all SACs and Legats, 1/29/75, captioned, "Destruction of Field Files and Records" which was based on a request from U. S. Senators Hugh Scott and Mike Mansfield. Those instructions remain in effect and you will be advised separately of any change in those instructions.

SAC, Honolulu need not obtain pleadings and documents from the United States Attorney but should continue to keep the Bureau advised of any developments in that case which may have a bearing on the pending litigation between the Founding Church of Scientology of Washington, D. C., Inc., et al. and the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act.

LAFAYETTE RONALD HUBBARD, FOUNDER;
FREEDOM OF INFORMATION-PRIVACY ACTS MATTER

Re airtels from Director, FBI, to SAC, Albany, on 1/24/75 and 3/3/75, captioned "Church of Scientology" which advised first of a restraining order by the United States District Court for the District of Hawaii precluding destruction of records pertaining to Scientology, and later modifying this order to pertain to IRS records only.

Captioned organization and its founder have been known to the FBI since 1951, and set forth at the end of this communication are the names of affiliated groups of which we are aware.

Since February, 1975, the FBI has been involved in various stages of litigation with Scientology, first under the FOIA, later under the Privacy Act, and now under both.

Numerous documents were released to Scientology pursuant to the provisions of the FOIPA, and based on those documents, Scientology has compiled a voluminous "False Report Correction" authored by one Reverend Vaughn Young. This report purports to establish that much of the information released from our files under the FOIPA suit is false, and is directed toward anything derogatory or unfavorable regarding Scientology or Hubbard reflected in documents released by the FBI.

Airtel to Albany
THE FOUNDING CHURCH OF SCIENTOLOGY (SCIENTOLOGY)

It is the stated objective of representatives of Scientology to obtain from the FBI a statement that all the documents that they were furnished are in fact false, and, in the alternative, to have these documents amended, destroyed or expunged.

It has come to the attention of FBIHQ that representatives of Scientology have contacted various field offices to furnish copies of this report, or documents of a like nature, and in some instances to make a request under the FOIA or PA for records of a particular Field Office.

Our dealings with any representative of Scientology should be conducted in a completely business-like fashion, accepting any correction reports or documents furnished, making a record of the contact, but in no way making any comment regarding the documents furnished or their impact or effect when compared with documents released from our files. FBIHQ should then be notified of the occurrence by proper correspondence with any documents received from Scientology included as an enclosure, and such correspondence marked to the attention of the FOIPA Section. Similarly, requests for access to field office files under FOIA or PA should be accepted but the requester should be advised that release of field office documents will be coordinated with FBIHQ. FOIPA Section should thereafter be contacted for further instructions regarding the processing of the request.

In an answer to the plaintiff's pleadings the Department of Justice in January, 1976, advised the court that no investigation of Scientology, or affiliated groups was going on at that time. This statement was made based upon a review of FBIHQ files pertaining to Scientology. It is now necessary, due to FBIHQ awareness of Scientology's activities throughout the country with regard to the "False Report Correction," that FBIHQ be advised of any substantive investigation regarding Scientology which may have been instituted and of which FBIHQ has not been advised. This should include investigations of the below-listed organizations and/or individuals, and the time span should encompass only those investigations which were actually being pursued in January, 1976, or commenced subsequent thereto.

FBIHQ should be advised only in the affirmative.
